Proposal Would Put More in Reserves Or Regular Forces Than Forrestal Plan

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) yesterday made public a draft bill which would put most men aged 19 through 25 not specifically exempted or deferred into the regular or reserve armed forces.

His revised measure was presented as Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the GOP Senate House Policy Committee, announced that the defense expansion bill had been given top priority over all other business.

The House draft bill differs in major respects from the proposal put forward by the Administration. As forecast, the Andrews version exempts millions of older men from registration and hundreds of thousands of veterans from induction.

Calls More to Colors

However, it would call many more men to the colors than the bill offered by Defense Secretary James Forrestal. And based on current estimates of available manpower within the draft age brackets it would put most of these in either the Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force, the National Guard or organized reserve components.

Andrews' bill boosts the strength of the Air Force beyond Forrestal's proposals by 102,000 officers and men—to give that branch the 502,000 total required for a 70-group air program. It keeps the Army at the 782,000 strength planned in the Administration measure and boosts Navy-Marine Corps manpower to 660,000—110,000 more than asked by Forrestal.

It also permits men of draft age to enlist quickly in the National Guard or an organized reserve unit of any of the armed services and be exempt from induction.

How Plan Would Work Out

Here is the effect of these provisions as visualized by House Committee experts:

Required to fill vacancies and build up the services by 350,000 additional men—as proposed by Forrestal—approximately 750,000 men. Perhaps 500,000 of these would be volunteers and the rest draftees.

A majority of the 202,000 additional men provided for the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force in the Andrews bill.

Approximately 120,000 men taken into the National Guard and

Baby of 14 Months Dies in Plunge From Third Floor

A 14-month old girl fell to death from the third floor window of her home, 824 D st. se., yesterday after climbing onto a chair and unlatching the screen.

Sandra Lee O'Bryhim, one of two infant children of a Naval Gun Factory toolmaker Joseph O'Bryhim, was pronounced dead at Providence Hospital at 3:30, 20 minutes after the accident.

O'Bryhim, 27, said he was in the living room when he heard his wife, Alma Lee, scream in the kitchen. When he rushed in, he said, the child was gone and the full-length window screen was dangling by its upper hinges. The bottom latch was undone.

Sandra Lee was taken to the hospital by her father. She had landed on the front stone steps leading to the first floor.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he would issue a certificate of accidental death following an autopsy this morning to determine which of the child's injuries caused death.

O'Bryhim is a Navy veteran and works on the night shift at the Gun Factory. His other child, also a girl, is Marina Ann, 6 weeks old.

Can You Guess Scores In New Gallup "Trial Heat?"

Governor Dewey wrote his forecast of the Wisconsin primaries, sealed it, and had it opened after the vote was in. Now you try doing the same for the latest Gallup Poll presidential "trial heat" appearing in Sunday's Washington Post.

How do you think the vote would be divided percentage-wise if Truman and Wallace were running now against Dewey . . . or against Stassen, Vandenberg, or MacArthur? Jot down your guesses—then see the newest standings as reported by Gallup, exclusively in The Sunday Washington Post.

Coal Strike Brings Or... For New Cut in Rail Travel

The Government, trying to conserve what coal supplies are left after the 26-day strike, yesterday ordered traffic on coal-burning railroads cut to half the normal volume

The order, which was forecast earlier this week, will go into effect at midnight, Thursday, unless the strike is ended by then. But there was no sign yesterday of any such favorable development.

Department of Justice lawyers were busy preparing for a legal battle-royal against John L. Lewis beginning Monday. They thought the signs pointed to a prolonged fight by Lewis against the Taft-Hartley Act and the injunction issued under its terms against the strike.

There also were these developments:

1. United Mine Workers and operator negotiators met again on the miners' pension dispute, which set off the strike March 15. There was no word of progress.

2. UMW attorneys asked dismissal of the operators' petition for court appointment of a third and neutral trustee of the miners welfare fund. The operators had requested the Federal District Court to act after Lewis and the mine owners deadlocked over plans for paying pensions out of the fund. In seeking the dismiss-al, union lawyers contended the court lacked jurisdiction.

3. Attorney General Clark declined to say whether the Justice Department would press contempt proceedings against Lewis in the event the strike should be called off quickly. "I'll cross that bridge when I come to it," Clark told reporters after a Cabinet meeting at the White House. He added, however, he would "feel pretty good" if Lewis halted the walkout.

4. Representative Hartley (R., N. J.), co-author of the new labor law, added a threat of tougher legislation. He said he would wait to see what the court did to Lewis on Monday, but would start hearings on a new bill if the present measure turns out to be "inadequate."

The train service cut was a curtailment of 25 per cent, but it followed an earlier order, already in effect, for a like amount. It applies to both passenger and freight traffic.

As of three days ago, the Office of Defense Transportation said that the railroads had supplies sufficient to last only 22 days.

Locally, railroad officials foresaw only slight effects from the new order. Most trains in and out of Union Station, it was ex-

Committee Asks Penalties For U. S. Reds

Bill Would Provide Fines, Prison Terms On Conspiracy Count

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Congress was asked yesterday to make a historic declaration that the United States Communist Party is a dangerous threat to this country as a member of a world-wide revolutionary conspiracy controlled by the "totalitarian dictatorship" of Soviet Russia.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities approved a carefully drafted program of legislative changes aimed at smashing foreign ties and stripping "the cloak of secrecy" from domestic Communists without outlawing the party.

Under the bill, leaders of the Communist Party would be subject to a 10-year jail term and/or $10,000 fine for criminal conspiracy against the United States unless all ties with Moscow are broken.

Asks "Front" Listings

The bill strikes at what the subcommittee called "the hard core of party leadership" . . . "the master conspirators." No penalties are established for "rank and filers" or what the committee called "theoretical Communists" not active in the "conspiracy."

The committee also called for compulsory registration of "Communist front" organizations. The bill provides that organizations under Communist domination must register with the Department of Justice. Failure to do so would subject the organization's leaders to two to five-year jail terms and/or $2000 to $5000 fines.

The committee provided that if such an organization failed to register voluntarily the Department of Justice would be required to hold administrative hearings to determine whether or not it should be so registered.

The administrative findings would then be subject to full court review.

Called More Equitable

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), chairman of the legislative subcommittee who wrote the report on the measure, said he believed this provision far more equitable than the present procedure. Under executive order, the Attorney General now issues lists from time to time of organizations deemed subversive, without

Candidates Give Nebraska A Going Over

Dewey Extends Tour As Stassen Forces, Tafts Put on Heat

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Omaha, Nebr., April 9. — This Midwestern nerve center today took on all the color of another Omaha beachhead.

Three Republican candidates for President, each fighting for his political life, have established a landing.

For none of the three can there be a retreat. A loss in Tuesday's Nebraska primaries could accentuate Wisconsin's rout of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

For Senator Robert Taft it would mean defeat in his very first primary try.

Here in Name Only

Four other Republican "outsiders" are here in name only—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gov. Earl Warren and Speaker Joseph W. Martin. All were entered whether they wished it or not, but here it's a three-way race.

The "invasion" technique is more than a metaphor. It looked like just that when a big contingent of top Stassen lieutenants arrived from Minnesota and Wisconsin to help direct the Stassen operation.

Governor Dewey, remembering the Wisconsin blitz, promptly cancelled his Saturday Gridiron dinner engagement and arranged for a third day's stumping tour through the western end of the State.

Stassen, completing tonight two days of zigzagging Dewey's trail through the State, raised the Governor's ante by announcing he will return to Omaha Monday for an election eve State-wide broadcast.

Senator Hugh Butler, whose powerful personal organization is Taft's mainspring of strength in this State, eyed the invasion of Stassen "ambassadors" glumly.

His aides balefully suggested Nebraska voters would "resent" Stassen influx. But there was no concealing the Butler organization's concern. They remember what happened in Wisconsin where Stassen volunteers helped their candidate stop a five-star general and blank the Governor of New York.

The team of "Bob and Martha" Taft completed its three-day tour

Viers Mill Builders Entitled To Bigger Price, FHA Says

The Federal Housing Administration disclosed yesterday that under a literal interpretation of the law, the builders of the Viers Mill Village project were entitled to more than the $8700 sales price.

It also was revealed that FHA used an estimated cost of $8100 in appraising homes in the development for loan guarantees.

The disclosures came from James H. Hewitt, District FHA insuring office director, who told a House Expenditures Subcommittee that the estimated cost of 90 per cent of the $8700 value placed on the homes for veterans.

Assertions that FHA and the Veterans Administration over-appraised the houses ni the development near Wheston, Md., are being studied by the subcommittee.

Hewitt said that although changes in specifications increased the value of some of the homes and dropped the value of others, FHA still maintained an average $8100 loan guarantee.

With Montgomery County Engineer Mort Thomas, Hewitt has testified that there are some building defects and particular criticism has been leveled at faulty concrete foundations.

Hewitt told the subcommittee that all defects will have to be corrected before any insurance approval is given.

J. Bond Smith, counsel for the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said the Commission felt there were too many identical, low-cost houses being built in an area that should have fewer, high-cost homes.

Engineer Thomas told the subcommittee that in a recent test of 25 chimneys in the project only one swayed—and that only one eighth of an inch. Previous witnesses said the chimneys were ill-constructed and rocked.

D. C. Festival Opens Today In Coronation

Crowning of Queen Set for 2:30 at Hains Point; Clear, Crisp Weather Due

Queen Doris Sheldon, high school sophomore from Claymont, Del., will arrive with her court on the royal yacht at the tip of Hains Point at 2:30 p. m.

The royal crown will be bestowed by Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson. Following the coronation, several vocalists and dance groups will present a musical program for the court and an expected 150,000 visitors.

Uncle to Be Escort

Proudest spectator will be Mrs. Louisa Sheldon, a Wilmington, Del., seamstress, who will arrive this morning to see her 16-year-old daughter crowned festival queen.

The Queen's escort will be her uncle, Navy Chief Petty Officer Kenneth G. Hayden of the Washington Naval Gun Factory. She is visiting her uncle and aunt at their home at 2515 Cliffbourne pl. nw.

Doris was chosen from among 48 representatives of States and territories, when a wheel of chance stopped at her State during a selection party Thursday night. She was nominated by the Delaware State Society.

The Queen and her State and international courts braved a biting wind yesterday to rehearse.

With teeth chattering and curls snarled, the princesses from 45 States and three Territories, and 16 daughters of the United Nations were escorted to the raised throne by members of the Armed Services and representatives of the embassies.

'Brunch' At Statler

Several large painted cherry blossoms form a background for the throne. The court will face a dozen or so double-blossom cherry trees, just beginning to bud, in the distance.

Today's pageant will be preceded by a "brunch" for the Queen and her court at the Statler Hotel. The royal party will then leave with police escort for the Inlet Bridge at the Potomac River and Tidal Basin, where it will board the royal yacht at 1 p. m.

A flotilla of more than 100 boats will accompany the royal party to Hains Point, where participants will be met by their escorts.

The weather forecaster has promised sunny skies for the affair, but the temperature will go no higher than the middle 50's he warned.

Anarchy Grips Bogota, Says Eyewitness

Reporter Tells How Rebels Went Through Conference Building

By Mac R. Johnson

Bogota, April 9 (NYHT).—Violent rioting broke out in Bogota, splattering the city with blood shortly after noon today, following the shooting of Jorge Eliecer Gaitan, popular leader of the Liberal Party.

There was complete anarchy. Police and troops were firing in the streets. It was a flaming, full-fledged revolt, a wild uncontrolled blood-bath.

The revolt is designed to overthrow the government of President Mariano Ospina Perez. It is the Liberal Party against the Conservatives.

Gaitan was shot four times by an unidentified assailant as he left his law office about 1 p. m. He died at 2:10 p. m.

Party Leader's Assassination Sparks Rioting; 31 Are Slain

Bloody revolution broke up the Inter-American Conference in Bogota, Colombia, yesterday.

At least 31 persons were killed.

Rioting which followed the assassination of Liberal presidential candidate Jorge Eliecer Gaitan grew into open revolt as mobs defied police and troops.

They wrecked the Capitol where conference meetings were held and burned and looted other government and private buildings.

Activities in the city of 400,000 were at a standstill. There was no electric light service. No police could be seen and fires raged through the city.

U. S. Delegates Safe

At a late hour forces of Conservative President Mariano Ospina Perez were moving to quell the revolt. They reoccupied the government radio building.

Troops had killed a least eight of a mob attempting to storm the presidential palace, and government defenders, shooting from the towers of the cathedral, killed 14 persons on one of the main streets.

United States Consul Franklin Hawley reported the rebels had taken control of Cali, third largest city in Colombia. They were backed by the army and police, he said.

United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall, head of the American delegation to the conference, told Undersecretary Lovett by telephone from Bogota that he and members of the American Embassy and American delegation staff were all right. Marshall and most of the delegation were housed in the suburbs, away from the main rioting area. They made no attempt to leave the country.

The nations of America had been holding their ninth conference with the purpose of bolstering resistance to communism and of increasing economic and military cooperation in the Western Hemisphere. Apparently none of the conference groups were in session when the rioting began in the afternoon.

Communists Accused

Diplomatic dispatches to the State Department here said Communists appeared to be spurring on the revolution and helping attempts to provike a general strike. The Confederation of Workers of Colombia has broadcast orders for an immediate national walkout, these advices said.

Eyewitness dispatches said a number of U. S. nationals, mostly American correspondents covering the conference, were cut off in the heart of the city.

Shooting and burning continued throughout the night and the skies were reported lit by the flames.

Party Leader Killed

Most normal communications was broken off. News came through diplomatic channels and from raido announcements by the revolutionists.

The revolutionist controlled radio said Laureano Gomez, Conservative Party leader and head Colombian delegate to the conference, had been killed. Guillermo Leon Valencia, an outstanding Conservative leader, and Jose Antonio Montalvo, Minister of Mines and Petroleum, also were reported killed.

The rebel radio said Dr. Dario Echandia, a veteran Liberal and provisional president of the revolutionary Junta, had managed to get inside the presidential palce. He was reported to be trying to talk Ospina Perez into resigning.

A previous broadcast said Echandia had taken over as president pending the arrival from New York of Vice President Eduardo Santos, also a Liberal. Echandia was acting president in 1944. Santos also is a forme rpresident.

Labor Told to Arm

Diplomatic dispatches said the Communist legal adviser of the CTC (the Confederation), Carlos Henry Pareja, instructed all members of Liberal labor to arm themselves in the streets or in hardware stores and to join in the revolt.

Diego Montana Cueller, Communist legal adviser of the Federation of Petrol Workers (of the CTC), announced that the peoples revolution was triumphant, aided

Seasonal Traffic Problem

Safety Officials to Discuss Increase in Children's Injuries

Concerned over a sharply mounting number of traffic injuries and fatalities among children in Greater Washington, traffic safety officials will meet Monday to discuss the problem.

The upswing in good weather was blamed by several officials for the toll of 29 children injured during the first four days of the month and the death of three youngsters within the past six weeks in the District.

Police Capt. L. T. Johnson of the Traffic Division disclosed yesterday that the number of injuries to children reached 274 by the end of March, an increase of 62 over the same period last year. Three youngsters were killed here from February 28 to last Monday. None was killed during the same period last year.

The total death toll from accidents in the District now stands at 24, two more than the number for this time last year. Total traffic deaths in 1947 were 72, of which 49 were pedestrians.

The meeting Monday will be held at 10 a. m. in the office of George R. Hammond, director of safety and education of the District division of the American Automobile Association. It will include precinct policemen in charge of safety patrols in the District; Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the traffic division, and safety patrol coordinators from Arlington, Fairfax, and Montgomery counties, and the city of Alexandria.

Hammond said that "in nice weather, youngsters get a little more careless. They get spring fever and forget caution during the months from April to June."

The safety expert blamed parents in part for the rising traffic casualties, noting that several complaints have been received that parents have intentionally led children through safety patrolmen's lines, encouraging disregard of traffic regulations.

A. Julian Brylawski, information and education chairman of the District Commisisoners' Traffic Advisory Board, said his group will concentrate in its forthcoming campaign on educating the parents in order to teach the children.

He said his group is planning a drive, with emphasis on child safety, to be launched after the close of school. Last year the group conducted a drive centered on the slogan, "Don't guess what a child will do." During the summer not a single child fatality occurred, he noted.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, warning that the accident rate will continue rising, reminded drivers that as the weather improves and the days grow longer, "gay and carefree children will be less cautious and drivers must be more so." Also there are almost 27,000 more automobile registrations this year than last which means that with the return to summer driving pedestrians generally will be in greater danger.

Advisers Call Curbs Vital to ERP, Defense

The Nation can fulfill its program for military defense and European recovery without having to return to wartime regimentation.

But inflationary pressures are strong and menacing; they dictate the enactment and even the "expansion" of the President's 10-point inflation control program.

And even under the best of circumstances, civilians must do without some of the goods they hoped for. Once again, some choice arises between "guns or butter."

3 Powers Prod Russians on Trieste Plan

By the Associated Press

The United States, Britain and France yesterday prodded Russia to speak up without further delay on their proposal to give Trieste back to Italy.

In a serie of notes delivered to the Soviet and Italian embassies here and abroad eight day before the critical Italian elections, April 18, the Western nations also suggested a meeting of the powers in Paris early next month to draft the proposal in detail, if Russia agrees to it.

The three nations first advanced the Trieste proposal on March 20 to enthusiastic acclaim by anti-

Joint Russian-British Probe Of Plane Crash Is Agreed On

Berlin, April 9 (AP).—A Soviet-controlled German news agency announced tonight that Russian occupation authorities had appointed a board of experts to work with the British in the investigation of Monday's collision of a British transport plane and a Soviet fighter which cost 15 lives.

The announcement was made after the British sent a mild reply to the Soviet military governor who had charged them with the blame in the crash.

It was apparent the Russians had accepted a British invitation for a joint investigation.

The agency's announcement foretold the contents of a reply by Lieut. Gen. G. S. Lukiantschenko, Soviet chief of staff, to the British note of this afternoon.

When the British note was delivered, its bearer was told Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, the Soviet commander, was "out of town." This raised speculation he had been called to Moscow for new instructions.

Strained relations produced a further suspension of four-power government of Germany when Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, announced there will be no meeting of the Allied Control Council tomorrow, the regular meeting day. The Council has not met since March 20 when the Russians walked out.

It was understood the British Foreign Office had dictated the conciliatory tone of the note dispatched by Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British military governor, to Sokolovsky.

General Clay had another conference with Maurice Couve de Murville, French Foreign Office negotiator on Germany, with an evident view to smoothing out obstacles to merger of the French zone with British-American Bizonia.

(An authoritative American source in London said the foundations for a western German state with many independent powers may be laid at an American-British-French conference in London in about 10 days.)

the Inter-American Conference, a Conservative Party leader and Foreign Minister of Colombia.

Jose Sanonio Montalvo, Minister of Justice in the present cabinet and former Minister of Interior, he was knifed to death in his country home, according to reports.

IL saw six bodies lying in Plaza Bolivar. Two policeman were reported hanged.

Gen. George C. Marshall is safe. I was at his residence when the rioting began. He lives about 20 blocks from the scenes of death and violence. With him at lunch were W. Averell Harrima, Secretary of Commerce, B gir.Gen. Marshall F. Carter, Maj. Walter Harris and Miss Ellen Vebber the official hostess.

Body Dragged to Palace

Here is what happened:

Gaitan was leaving his office when the assassin, dressed in civilian clothes, shot him four times. A crowd attacked the assailant.

They killed him with their hands, beating him with shoeshine boxes, kicking and stomping him. They tied a rope around him, stripped him, and dragged his naked body through the streets. They dumped the body in front of Palacio de Narino, the residence of President Ospina Perez.

Some cried. Some shouted, "down with the government, down with the conservatives."

Army troops drove the crowd away from the president's home after they had broken windows. President Ospina and his wife were in the building and are still there.

People hearid of Gaitan's death by word of mouth and over the radio. They rushed downtown for an orgy of burning, sacking and killing.

Conference Building Looted

For 20 minutes the mob worked its destructive way through the conference headquarters, breaking furniture and typewriters. The unarmed Capitol guard did not try to stop them. Soon 100 soldiers arrived and drove out the mob with rifles and bayonets. Delegates who were still in the building and conference personnel were herded up on the third floor for protection. Troops guarded the stairway.

The mob shouted: "They killed our leader, Gaitan!" They overturned streetcars and set them afire. They wrecked automobiles. They raided hardware stores for weapons. They set fire to the palace of the President, which is not to be confused with the presidential palace where Ospina Perez lives. They put the torch to the administration building of the provisional government of Cundina Marca. The newspaper El Siglo, Conservative mouthpiece of Foreign Minister Gomez, was burned. Fires could be sen in various parts of the city.

Jean Speiser, Life photographer, and I fought our way through the crowds to get back to our hotel from General Marshall's residence. The hotel, the Astor, is just across the street from Palazio de Narino.

Isolated in Hotel

A half dozen correspondents are isolated here. There is continual gunfire around us. We cannot leave the hotel. The troops are lying on their bellies all around us.

We have seen the troops kill two civilians who jumped on a small army tank. We have seen the same tank run over a man and crush him to death. We can still see the body of Gaitan's murderer in the gutter in front of the palace. Police have thrown a tarpaulin over the body, but the bare feet stick out. There dams up behind the stiff corpse. is intermittent rain and the water

As I write this with gunfire ringing outside, the troops fire up and down the street at any moving object.

The residence of Ospina Perez still is protected by government troops.

Violence Continues

We have seen only two men enter the President's residence. They were Fabio Lozano, war minister in the coalition cabinet until two weeks ago, and his brother, Carlos, chief of Colombia's delegation to the Conference. Both are Liberal Party members—the opposite to the President.

In placing the body of the assassin in front of Ospina Perez' residence, the mob showed where it was placing the blame on his government.

Murder, shooting and bloodshed continued as nighttime approached. Some American correspondents were isolated in the Embassy, some in other hotels. All got out of the Capitol building.

Bogota Swep t By Revolution

by elements of the police and the army.

The first estimate of the situation here was that the revolution had begun more or less spontaneously following the shooting of Eliecer Gaitan, and that the Communists had then sought to make as much capital as possible uot of the turmoil.

Gaitan was regarded as a leftist in the Liberal Party and one who had never openly disavowed Communist support although he had not actively sought it.

Use of Tanks Reported

Radio Difusora Nacional announced that it was in the hands of "Liberal students" and broadcast an ultimatum to President Ospina Perez to abandon the palace "if you would save your life and the lives of the members of your family."

This radio station reported that army tanks were advancing against the presidential palace.

Assailant Killed by Mob

Earlier press dispatches said Gaitan was shot four times as he emerged from his office. Crowds of his followers rushed to the scene. Some wept, other dipped handkerchiefs in his blood on the sidewalk.

As police attempted to remove the assailant, the crowd seized him, kicked him to death and dragged his battered body for seven blocks. It was left, naked, before the door of the presidential palace.

Soon thousands of demonstrators surged around the capitol on the city's main square and at the palace in the next block. They wrecked the Capitol and other buildings where the Inter-American Conference sessions were being held.

Dispatches received at the State Department and by telephone from Bogota said police, vastly outnumbered, appeared reluctant to interfere as the revolt grew.

"Rioting was furthered by broadcasts over the captured government radio with speakers urging widespread revolution," one dispatch said. " A small bomb exploded outside the United States Embassy and delegation buildings with only windows broken. Looting was widespread in liquor and hardware stores.

"Trolley cars were upended and fires were raging.

"The government was powerless against the new Junta and the killing of Laureano Gomez (Conservative Party leader) was reported by radio."

"As the crowd moved into the capitol it broke glass doors and windows. Somebody set fire to several rooms and furniture was piled up and wrecked.

"The conference press room was invaded and attacked. Stones flew fast and furiously and newsmen had trouble trying to get out.

"Troops arrived at the Plaza Bolivar, and were met with cries from the crowd:

"Viva the Colombian army. Viva the people."

The troops took no immediate action and appeared to hesitate. At the time an automobile was burning in the Plaza Bolivar, which was filled with thousands of persons shouting for the downfall of the government. They cheered the Liberal Party."

There were more than 80 persons in the American delegation at Bogota, including Secretary of Commerce Harriman, William M. Martin, president of the Export-Import Bank; John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, and Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour.

The embassy staff, headed by Ambassador Willard L. Beaulac, numbers 75 to 80 American officials and employes.

Other high-ranking members of the American group include Representative Donald L. Jackson (R., Calif.) and Representative Michael J. Mansfield (D., Mont.).

Argentina sent three planes from Buenos Aires, it was reported, to bring its delegation out.

The revolution was the outgrowth of months of political quarreling and rioting between Conservatives and Liberals.

The Liberal Party estimated over 100 of its followers were killed in the prerevolutionary riots.

In the 1946 election, Conservative Ospina Perez, millionaire businessman, won the presidency mainly because of a split in the Liberal Party.

Gabriel Turbay, former ambassador to Washington, and Eliecer Gaitan were the candidates of the two Liberal factions. Turbay died recently.

Together they polled over 140,000 votes more than Ospina Perez.

The Liberal Party, which had maintained a 16-year hold on the government, retained control of Congress, however.

Ospina Perez, brought Liberal party members into his cabinet, continuing a precedent set by his predecessor, Alberto Lleras Camargo, now director-general of the Pan-American Union.

Uneasy Compromise

However, the relationship was uneasy. The Gaitan element in the Liberal Party opposed collaboration in the government.

Beginning in January bloody rioting broke out in Santander, Santander del Norte, Boyaca and Caldas.

Ospina Perez sent troops to put down the rioting.

Aroused by the clashes and deaths, Gaitan last month presented a series of grievances to Ospina Perez.

Gaitan considered the President's reply unsatisfactory and ordered all Liberals out of the government shortly before the Inter-American Conference opened on March 30. They complied and a completely Conservative cabinet was appointed.

Liberal newspapers charged he sympathized with the Germans during the war.

The revolution broke Colombia's proud record of 50 years of constitutional government. She was one of the few Latin-American countries not subject to upheavals.

Civil Service Cuts Tape for Defense Hiring

The Civil Service Commission has let down the bars to permit the European Recovery Program and the defense agencies to hire the employes they need with the minimum of red tape.

A regulation was approved yesterday by the commission that opens the way for the agencies to make emergency indefinite appointments up to Jupe 30, 1952. In other words, the Economic Cooperation Administration, Army, Navy, Air Forces and perhaps other agencies will be permitted to hire employes themselves.

However, any employes who are hired will have to meet the minimum Civil Service qualifications for particular jobs, and Civil Service will retain the right to pass on the qualifications of any employe.

This isn't a blanket withdrawal of Civil Service rules. Before any agency can hire anyone direct, it must work out a specific and detailed agreement with the Civil Service Commission.

What it all means is this—that the shortage of manpower and the general resistance of people in many fields to entering Federal service have forced the Civil Service Commission to return to wartime emergency measures in an effort to attract the thousands of new Government people who must be hired if the defense and recovery programs are to succeed.

Meantime, it's reported that Wayne C. Taylor, former Commerce Undersecretary and Export-Import Bank chairman, will be appointed director of operations for Paul G. Hoffman's ECA.

Working with Hoffman are: Dr. Edward S. Mason, a Harvard economist who has been a State consultant; Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, a Duke Universtiy economist who worked with the Harriman Committee that planned the ECA program, and Richard Bissell, another economist who worked with the Harriman group. W. T. (Tex) Moore, a New York lawyer, is with Hoffman temporarily.

ERP, Defense Needs Call For Some Controls, Advisers Say

Truman's Council of Economic Advisers, in a quarterly report made to the President and his Cabinet yesterday. It was the first quarterly report of the council which the White House released.

The council argued fervently that European aide the defense program and the new tax reductions increased the need for allocation, monetary and credit controls such as Mr. Truman recommended to the special session of Congress last fall.

But at least one of the men who heard the report discussed at Cabinet meeting by Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the council, had reservations on this point.

Hoffman Opposes Controls

He was Paul G. Hoffman, just sworn-in as administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration. He told reporters that he hoped the job would not entail a return of any compulsory controls on the American economy.

He said he hoped voluntary controls would be sufficient, and predicted that they would do a "better job" than Federal regulation in meeting the recovery needs of Europe.

But he took pains to explain that this did not mean he was throwing out altogether the possible necessity of compulsory controls.

If voluntary arrangements work, "we ought to stay with them," he said. But he reminded newsmen he had been out of the country for some time and would need about a month to see for himself the actual requirements of the situation.

The council's report insisted that "some rather systematic and vigorous discipline . . . must be exercised" over the economy.

The European Recovery Program was not in itself a new inflationary influence, the report declared, since it would not exceed the export surplus which the Nation lived with in 1947. And even the defense program, it thought, "would seem to be something the country could take in its stride."

But they both mean a withdrawal of goods from American consumers—without a corresponding reduction of purchasing power. To meet this without provoking inflation, the report implied, means that citizens will have to make up their minds to sacrifice some of the things they want.

Greed for Higher Income Hit

The hopes for a higher living standard are not thereby "nullified," said the report. But they must be partly postponed or even revised downward.

In a sentence which seemed to be directed to labor, and to counsel restraint on third-round wage increases, the report stated:

"During this period if any group insists that its income shall be advanced in proportion to every advance in prices or that it shall be in a position to pay to whatever level is needed to bid its accustomed amount of goods away from other users, it is in effect demanding that it be exempted from sharing in the common burden of protecting our society."

Inflation Still a Danger

The report said that while the February break in commodity prices had healthy effects, the danger of inflation was not over. New impetus to the price-wage spiral of inflation, it found, was given by the tax reductions and the rise in steel prices.

And it warned that the coal strike was our "foremost domestic problem," with disastrous economic and inflationary results if it continues for long.

The council's recommendations:

1. The "imprudent" reduction of taxes necessitates the imposition of new taxes to offset increased defense expenditures.

2. Credit controls, both at the consumer level and to restroin themaking of new bank credit, shold be put into effect.

Would Push Bond Drive

3. The savings bond campaign should be pushed with all vigor.

4. Alloction and priority controls should be enacted and applied. The defense program, coming on top of ERP, makes them doubly necessary.

5. Price control and rationing authority should be granted and a system should be prepared to put them into effect. The report admitted that except for a few materials, this power has not yet been needed. But, it said, the prospect for meat supply are so poor and there is so much uncertainty about the eneral food situation that standy power is required.

6. The laor market is tiht; to lessen difficulties that will arise, the national office of the United States Employment Service should be strengthened. There should be manpower control, but of an indirect, rather than direct, sort.

House Plan Asks Big Draft

305,000 men accepted in the organized (drilling) units of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force to build them to the ceilings proposed by the bill.

Takes Nearly All Available

The total runs close to the pool of men estimated by Secretary Forrestal as being available in the 19-through-25-age bracket after veterans, "necessary" men, those with dependents, or physically or mentally unfit are exempted or deferred. Forrestal put this available number at 1,355,000 men.

Committee experts point out that the provisions of the Andrews bill are tentative, and that some veterans and men outside the draft ages would volunteer. They state, however, that most eligible, non-deferred men probably would face the prospect of some sort of service next year.

Chairman Andrews' committee will begin hearings on the draft measure on Monday with Forrestal and Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett as the first witnesses. The group will meet daily, calling Army, Navy and Air Force chiefs and a host of other witnesses.

Final determination of the terms of the draft bill in either the House o rSenate, however, will await some broad decisions on the overall defense program. President Truman and Secretary Forrestal have proposed a three-billion-dollar supplemental defense budget, providing for "balanced" expansion of the armed forces, a stopgap draft and universal military training.

A majority of Congress apparently wants a much greater air force expansion, is willing to accept the draft, but opposes UMT. This conflict between defense officials and Congress must be resolved before either the Senate or House Armed Services Committee will approve a bill.

Forrestal to Report on Plan

Forrestal has promised the Senate Committee a report by late next week on the cost and advisability of adopting the 70-group Air Force program, plus possible expansion of the other services.

He stresses the importance of keeping the forces in balance and the dangers of inuation and disturbance of the national economy by an ill-considered arms expansion.

Senator Taft said that the way would be cleared for consideration of the defense bill on the floor whenever the committee has it ready. Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) says he hopes to have a measure ready week after next.

Navy Officials Testify

The Senate Committee heard Navy officials yesterday at a closed session and will call back Army chiefs early next week. Gurney told reporters that adoption of the draft and UMT would require 700 million dollars more next year than the 14 billions already proposed by President Truman for defense. Six hundred million of this woul dbe for the training program and 100 million to set up the Selective Service system.

Representative Andrews' draft bill differs from the Administration in many major respects. Draft ages and the two-year period of service are identical, however. Here are the principal changes in the new bill:

Inductions would stop at the end of two years unless extended by Congress.

All draftees, volunteers and any one in uniform when the measure passes would receive the educational, loan and other provisions of the GI bill of rights.

Easier on "Conchies"

No one could be inducted until two months after the measure became law, and then only if the President certified to Congress that volunteers had not filled the ranks.

Conscientious objectors against even non-military service in the Army and Navy would be deferred from all service if they met the requirements of the bill. Under the Administration bill and the old draft "conchies" were put in civilian camps.

The director of Selective Service and virtually the entire staff of the draft system would have to be civilians.

Registration ages are fixed at 18 through 30, instead of 44.

Veterans with at least a year's service would be exempt from all service in peace-time. Those with three to 12 months would have to enroll in the National Guard or Reserve. Those with less than 90 days' service would be liable to induction.

All draftees and volunteers who sign up for less than two years would go into the reserve after completing their active service.

Men o fdraft age could escape a call by enlisting in the National Guard or an organized reserve unit until they reached the following limits: Guard, 350,000 men; Army and Air Force Reserves, 175,000; Navy, 250,000; Marines, 50,000.

The special draft for doctors, dentists and veterinaries is retained, but spelled out as to numbers taken and deferments. Only three doctors and two dentists per one thousand men could be maintained, less than now. The medical men would be called in the following order:

First, all those less than 35 years old with less than 90 days' prior active service; second, those 35 through 44, with les than 90 days' service; third, Army Specialized Training Program and V-12 men who had more than 90 days' but less than two years' active duty, not counting internship; fourth, those with less than two years' active service; fifth, others as prescribed by the President.

Methodist Women Hit Draft, Back U. N.

Huntington, W. Va., April 9 (AP). More than 300 Methodist women from 10 States last night passed resolutions against a draft, and for the United Nations, the President's civil rights program and protection of Alaskan Indians.

At the final night session of their four-day gathering, the delegates to the seventh annual conference of the northeastern jurisdiction of the Women's Society of Christian Service voted to carry through their anti-draft resolution with a barrage of letters to lawmakers.

Chiang Admits Loss Of Seven Divisions

On Wide Fronts

Burma War Against Reds Spreading

Rangoon, Burma, April 9 (AP).—The Burmese government, four months after independence from Britain, was fighting on widespread fronts today to crush a Communist rebellion.

A communique said heavy fighting was going on between government troops and Communists in the heavily Karen-populated Bassein district in the Irawaddy delta, 90 miles west of the capital, and the Sagaing district on the west bank opposite Mandalay, 350 miles northeast of Rangoon.

The communique said Communists were being routed in the Pegu section after the Burmese air force had been called out. The uprising there is being led by Thakin Chit, secretary of the White Flag Communist Party.

(Outgoing dispatches from Rangon are now being censored by the government.)

Officials said the Communists, with modern weapons, apparently were trying to establish control from Pegu north to the Mandalay section.

Red Tactics Threaten Siability, Briton Says

London, April 9 (U.P.)—Minister of State Hector McNeil, No. 2 man in the Foreign Office, asserted today that Russia's propaganda and infiltration tactics made her "the enemy of international collaboration and of international stability."

McNeil, in a speech at Kelty in Scotland, admitted that possibly the present government and the previous government of Winston Churchill "went too far" at the Yalta and Potsdam conferences "to try and meet our Soviet ally."

Conditions Not Bad As Painted, Though, He Tells Assembly

Nanking, April 9 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek "confessed" today that the Communist winter offensive had destroyed seven of his finest divisions in Manchuria, but vowed to hang on there and to annihilate the enemy in central China in six months.

Addressing a silent National Assembly, the Chinese government leader insisted conditions were "not as bad as painted abroad.

"We have made serious military mistakes and suffered great defeats," he said.

"I confess seven of the government's best divisions were destroyed in Manchuria. They were my best armies. These forces are being reorganized and I refuse to admit defeat, because our fighting strength is still powerful."

Chiang then said the defense of Manchuria would be continued. "In north China our strength under Gen. Fu Tso-yi is growing, and I guarantee within six months to annihilate all Communists below the Yellow River (central China)."

The Generalissimo outlined a new military policy of seeking local superiority, the very method by which, he acknowledged, the Communists have so often won.

Chiang told the Assembly his government "is still solvent."

He admitted inflation had sent Chinese currency to 600,000 to one United States dollar and that 70 trillion Chinese Yuan dollars were outstanding. (At the rate quoted, this would be not quite 117 million dollars United States.)

China, he said, had 110 million United States dollars in foreign exchange; 170 million dollars in gold and silver reserves, and other assets on which 400 million dollars "can be realized by sales."

"With the 463 million dollars assistance from America (newly voted by Congress), plus our reserves of American dollars, gold and silver in the Central Bank, the prospects of our economic life are brighter than ever," he insisted.

Italian Police Prepared for 'Eventualities'

Rome, April 9 (AP).—Vice Premier Randolfo Pacciardi told a news conference tonight the government is in complete control to maintain order during the elections April 18 and is ready for "any eventuality."

"I believe that the right to vote is absolutely guaranteed," he declared.

In three months, he said, police had seized six cannon, 29 mortars, 479 machineguns, 4508 rifles and other arms but are still uncovering hidden caches.

Arturo Michelini, a former Fascist leader, said today, "We are prepared for bloody civil war if the Communists conquer Italy.

Michelini, an organizer of Italy's newest nationalist movement, declared that 150,000 to 200,000 persons in the Italian Social Movement (MSI) would "defend the state against any Communist attempt at seizure. We would fight with every means, including arms, knowing if we lost the Communists would hang us."

Michelini was a high-ranking Fascist before the war and served in Mussolini's forces in Spain and Russia.

The cabinet decided to propose that electioneering end on April 16, 32 hours before the polls open, in order to give the public a cooling—off period.

Railroad Reorganization Bill Signed by Truman

President Truman yesterday signed a bill permitting railroads in financial difficulties to reorganize without going into bankruptcy.

The legislation sets up reorganization procedure through the Interstate Commerce Commission when 75 per cent of security holders approve.

Moreover, it permits railroads now in bankruptcy to reorganize, with ICC and court approval, upon request of at least 25 per cent of the stockholders.

3 Powers Ask Soviet Reply

Communists in Italy. Yesterday's joint action appeared to be another pre-election move to put Russia and its Communist associates on the spot once more before the Italian electorate.

In another move along the same line, the State Department here confirmed reports from Trieste that Britain and the United States as occupation authorities in a part of the Free Territory of Trieste are planning to turn over considerable local government power to the largely Italian native population Monday.

The American request for "an early expression of the views of the Soviet government" on the Trieste proposal and the suggestion for the Paris meeting were made in a note that Undersecretary of State Lovett sent to Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin here late yesterday. At the same time, Lovett sent a note to Italian Ambassador Alberto Tarchiani proposing the Paris meeting. The British and French sent parallel notes.

Yugoslavs Act to Hamper Trieste Border Traffic

Trieste, April 9 (AP).—Allied informants said today that the Yugoslavs had acted to restrict traffic across the zonal border dividing the free territory of Trieste by diverting nearly all traffic into the British-American zone through one blockpost.

Reports indicated the move was designed to prevent young men fleeing from the Yugoslav army draft.

10,000-Cable Vote Plea Sought to Send to Italy

Opening a campaign for 10,000 "Freedom Cables" to Italy, a group of District residents of Italian descent yesterday announced they hoped an eleventh hour appeal from Americans would result in a defeat of the Communists in the forthcoming Italian election.

Ugo Carusi, former head of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, who heads the local Committee for a Democratic Italy, said the campaign was a spontaneous one and not under Government sponsorship.

He urged Washingtonians to send cables or contribute funds to his group for the dispatch of cables as a means of "impressing Italians as closely to election day as possible that they have millions of friends in this country and need not fal for the false promises of the Communists."

Among the prepared messages to be sent by cable are:

"Save Italy, our close ties and Catholic faith by voting against the Communists on April 18. Affectionate salutation.

"Don't vote yourselves behind the iron curtain. A vote against communism April 18 will insure your well-being and that of the world.

"A vote against communism means a vote for peace and liberty, as well as the assurance of our generous help."

Headquarters of the local committee, which will have a Baltimore counterpart, is in Room 1194 of the National Press Building.

hearings or provision for court review.

Leaders of Communist front groups would have to furnish the Department of Justice with a list of members, but the committee did not call for publication of such lists.

Tax exemption would be denied for contributions to front organizations. Hearings last February brought out that in many cases contributions to Communist fronts have been deducted as charitable donations for income tax purposes.

Would Label Publications

Those organizations found to be Communist fronts would be required to label all publications, radio broadcasts, and the like, as emanating from a Communist front.

Nearly every witness before the subcommittee stressed the necessity of this provision.

The committee also asked Congress to specifically deny Government jobs to persons who are members of the Communist Party. Any person convicted of making a false statement to obtain Government employment, under this bill, would be subject to a two to five year jail term and/or a $2000 to $5000 fine.

Any Government official knowingly employing a Communist would be subject to a fine of not more than $5000 and/or imprisonment for not more than 2 years.

Other Provisions

The committee also recommended:

1. A provision requiring that passports be denied members of the Communist Party. Nixon said American Communists could be given only "one-way tickets" allowing no return to this country. This provision, like many others, is aimed at breaking up foreign connections of the United States Communists.

2. That the House Judiciary Committee consider proposals requiring aliens to register annually with the Department of Justice, and allowing the department to hold without bond any alien who is to be deported for subversive activities.

3. That the Judiciary group consider legislation requiring that the number of Russians and citizens from Soviet-dominated countries allowed to enter this country be restricted to the number of Americans permitted behind the Iron Curtain. Strict reciprocity in treatment of aliens from Communist-dominated countries was suggested.

4. A bill introduced by Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) raising penalties for contempt of Congress from the present one-year and $1000 to a maximum of five years and $5000.

5. Tightening up of espionage laws, particularly the Voorhis and McCormack Acts, requiring the registration of organizations and individuals representing foreign governments in this country. In the Voorhis Act specific officers of each organization would be required to register under stiff penalties for failure to do so.

Details To Be Worked Out

Nixon said the committee, while unanimously approving the bill in principle, has still to work out a few details of language. The bill will probably be officially introduced late next week.

Called "The Subversive Activities Control Bill of 1948," part of the subcommittee measure will be introduced as an amendment to the bill introduced last month by Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.)

Criminal penalties for Communist leaders would apply under broadening amendments to the Smith law prohibiting subversive activities.

Broadcast Smith Law

The committee tentatively adopted language broadening the Smith law (Alien Registration Act of 1940) to apply a 10-year maximum jail penalty to anyone "who is an active participant in the management, direction or supervision of any Communist organization (as define d intheS ubversive Activities Control Act. 1948) to knowingly and wilfully (a) conspire to subvert the interest of the United States by aiding or abetting the accomplishment of either the immediate or ultimate objectives of the world Communist movement or (b) conspire to disrupt trade, commerce or Government in the United States with intent to further the objectives of the world Communist movement, or (c) to conspire with agents or agencies of any totalitarian foreign government or any totalitarian political organization to destroy or overthrow any government in the United States with the objective of establishing in its stead a Communist dictatorship."

Nixon said he did not believe that "Section b" could be applied to any labor union, even one under Communist leadership which called a strike to impede America's defense. It would first have to be proved that the union existed "primarily" not as a labor union but as a front organization, he said.

'Clear and Present Danger'

The report found that the Communist Party acting "as the American bridgehead of the Red army" constitutes "a clear and present danger" to the United States.

Although recommending new legislation, the report stated that much more could have been done to curb communism had the Justice Department over the past 15 years enforced existing laws.

"This apathy to, and coddling of, the Communists in the United States by the Department of Justice is in great measure responsible for the magnitude of the problem with which we are faced today," the report stated.

The committee called for vigorous prosecution against law-breaking Communists.

Criticism of the Justice Department did not extend to the FBI.

"The committee wishes to point out that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has done an excellent job in investigating the activities of Communists in the United States," the repor tsaid, "but investigation without prosecution is not an answer to the problem."

Nixon told reporters he did not know whether or not the House leadership has given the green light to this legislation for enactment this session. But from other sources it was learned House leaders plan early action.

The subcommittee chairman said he did not believe it was necessary to legislate against all 74,000 registered Communists in this country. What is necessary, he said, is to cut off the conspiratorial ties with a foreign government.

In its conclusion the report said: "The subcommittee has not attempted to recommend legislation which will deal with so-called theoretical Communists in the United States. We are seeking rather to strike a body blow at the American cadre of the Soviet-direct Communist conspiracy.

"We believe that if its criminal activities are prosecuted, its false fronts exposed, and its foreign assistance and direction cut away, the movement in the United States, standing alone for what it is, will be overwhelmingly defeated.

"We are willing to permit the theories of communism and democracy to clash in the open market place of political ideas in America, but we insist that communism not be allowed to have the unfair advantage in this conflict of the unrestricted use of illegal means, the cloak of secrecy and fraud, and the assistance and direction of a foreign communist dictatorship."

The committee, Nixon said, had been influenced in drafting its legislation by the testimony of such witnesses as Donald R. Richberg, former general counsel for NRA; Adolph A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State; Admiral William H. Standley, former ambassador to Russia; John Foster Dulles, former United Nations delegate; Louis Waldman, attorney for the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Dr. William Y. Elliott, professor of government, Harvard University, and James Burnham, New York University professor and author.

Finnish President Defends Red Pact

In Broadcast to People, He Says It Will Help Country Steer Clear of Big-Power Conflicts

Helsinki, Finland, April 9 (U.P.).—Finnish President Juho K. Paasikivi defended the new Soviet-Finnish treaty today as a protection for Finland's policy of trying to keep out of big power controversies.

Paasikivi explained the treaty to the Finnish people in a 30-minute radio speech. He said it did not follow the pattern of Russian agreements with other eastern European countries. It was drawn, he explained, with special Soviet consideration for Finland's geographic location and special position.

"With reference to misgivings expressed abroad, I shall add that no secret clauses are connected with this agreement," he said.

Parliament is expected to approve the pact in routine fashion next week.

The Social Democrat press said the treaty might harm Finland's commercial relations with the West, but political quarters said Finland got an "easy treaty."

Paasikivi said any disturbances of public order in Finland's coming election will have no chance of success.

Press Freedom Policy Backed At Geneva Talk

Geneva, Switzerland, April 9 (U.P.).—Two major resolutions were adopted unanimously today at the International Conference on Freedom of Information and the Press.

The 53-nation policy committee adopted a resolution condemning war incitement and news falsification. The all-nation technical committee approved a Chinese resolution to encourage growth of national news agencies in underdeveloped countries.

The all-nation legal committee adopted an American resolution setting up continuing machinery to further the free flow of information around the world.

It was the second straight day that Communist states had demonstrated a willingness to compromise.

Czech Reds Plan Merger Of Democrats

Prague, Czechoslovakia, April 9 (U.P.).—Communist Premier Klement Gottwald said tonight that all parties had accepted plans for a single list of candidates in the May 23 elections.

At the same time, he indicated to an extraordinary session of the Communist central committee that a merger with the Social Democrats was "next on the program."

The People's Party newspaper Lidova Demokracies was quick to point out that the single list ballot would "economize on paper "and save time for voters so "we can peacefully devote ourselves to our work."

Even Erban, Minister of Social welfare, told a parliamentary committee yesterday that the purge of "reactionaries" had affected 8300 persons.

Erban said 5800 persons had been dismissed from jobs in private or nationalized firms and 2500 from civil service.

20 German SS Officers Convicted

Nuernberg, Germany, April 9 (AP).—An American tribunal today convicted 20 Nazi SS (Elite Guard) officers of engaging in the murder of at least one million persons.

One of the 22 men in the dock was found innocent. Another was acquitted on two counts and convicted of a third.

It was assumed that many of the defendants will receive the death penalty.

Convicted on all counts were 4 SS generals, 12 colonels, 3 majors and 1 lieutenant. They were commanding officers of "Einsatz Commando" groups sent into Russia behind the German armies to wipe out whole classes of people listed as racial undesirables.

Greeks Kill 9800 in Year

Athens, Greece, April 9 (U.P.).—The Greek general staff said in a report today that guerillas suffered 20,284 casualties, including 9800 killed, in army operations against them during the year ended last March.

However, the report said guerilla strength, which was 12,000 a year ago, now was about 30,000.

Meanwhile, one of the United Nations Balkan observation teams reported it had witnessed tracer bullets being fired into Greece from inside Albania and had seen vehicles move from Albania into Greece.

Dwight Griswold, head of the American aid mission, told an Athens press conference today the Greek budget would have to be balanced if inflation is to be avoided.

Jews Retake Kastel, Claim Arab Loss 200

Jerusalem, April 9 (AP).—Jewish fighters today stormed and recaptured Kastel, the most fought-over village in Palestine, in a new drive for control of the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem highway, a Jewish Agency spokesman announced.

The victory restored to Haganah, the Jewish militia, positions lost yesterday during a determined Arab attack in which the Arabs' Judean army commander was killed.

The commanders of the victorious Jewish force said 200 Arabs had been killed in the attack. They admitted half the dead Arabs were women and children. Jewish losses were set at 4 killed, 40 wounded.

Tonight the 300 Jews holding Kastel prepared themselves for further assaults on Arab positions in the Judean Hills, Kastel is 5 miles west of Jerusalem.

The Jewish counterattack was a combined operation by Haganah and the extremist groups Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang.

[An Arab force of 2500 was reported massing for a new attack on Kastel.]

Today in the compounds of the Mosque of Omar in Jerusalem's old walled city 30,000 persons attended the funeral of Abdul Khadder Husseini, slain Arab leader. He was entombed as he fell in the Kastel fight—in uniform and with a revolver strapped to his waist. Arab shops and restaurants in the area were closed.

Officials said Jerusalem's water supply was expected to be restored to normal tomorrow. Attackers identified unofficially as Arabs severed the pipeline yesterday.

Haganah units at Mishmar Haemek in northern Palestine launched a counterattack today and occupied the Arab villages of Abu Sheik, Shusha and Nuivite.

In southern Palestine the Jews evacuated the villages of Khulda and Deir Muheisan near Beersheba and the Arabs returned.

U. S. to Offer Truce Plan For Palestine

New York, April 9 (U.P.).—The United States promised tonight that it would bring forward on Monday some concrete suggestions for a truce agreement to end the Arab-Jewish warfare in Palestine.

At the same time, Britain flatly rejected overtures from several Security Council members designed to extend the May 15 deadline for termination of the British Holy Land mandate.

The United States was not one of the countries requesting an extension.

The developments took place during private council talks on the new American formula for substituting an indefinite U. N. trusteeship for the U. N. partition program.

Russia has refused to attend any of the meetings.

The Palestine Commission appeared ready to go ahead with its plan to set up the provisional Jewish government called for in the U. N. partition program.

Soviet Writer Asks Increase In Incentives

Moscow, April 9 (U.P.).—The magazine Bolshevik, official organ of the powerful central committee of the Communist Party, called today for greater encouragement of individual initiative in order to spur production.

A flat wage scale for all workers is not adequate under the Socialist system, the magazine said.

"Material encouragement of those who work well" must be given by a system of piecework, premiums, graduated pay scales based on the worker's qualifications and increased payment for heavy work, it was explained.

Bolshevik's article constituted a reaffirmation and an intensification of the piecework and premium system in the current five-year production plan.

The same applies to collective farms, Bolshevik said. Besides a regular share of a farm's crop, the magazine said, the individual must be given a bonus, based on the quantity and quality of his work, for over-fulfillment of quotas, the article said.

Bolshevik warned that nothing in the system of encouragement of initiative must lead to unrestrained individualism.

New Talks Agreed In Packers' Strike

Swift and Armour May Be Followed By Other Big Firms

Chicago, April 9 (U.P.).—The striking CIO United Packinghouse Workers' Union and two of the Nation's largest meat-packing firms today accepted a proposal by President Truman that negotiations be resumed to end the 25-day-old meat strike.

The union, Swift & Co., and Armour announced acceptance shortly after Mr. Truman had asked the strikers and packers to get together in an effort to settle the walkout. The President withheld court action and did not order the Justice Department to seek an injunction to halt the strike.

Swift, which often sets the pattern for the major packers in union negotiations, said it would "be glad to attend" negotiation meetings.

Others Expected to Accept

Spokesmen for Cudahay, Wilson and Morrell did not comment immediately but were expected to accept. Mr. Truman instructed the Conciliation Service to arrange the new conferences.

Meanwhile, the American Meat Institute, representing the packers, reported that about twice as many animals were converted into meat this wek as were slaughtered and processed during the first week of the strike.

Union President Ralph Helstein said "we welcome the President's suggestion" to resume negotiations.

"We will cooperate in every possible way to resolve the dispute," he said.

Mr. Truman acted after receiving the report of his Emergency Fact-Finding Board, which conducted an investigation of the strike.

Truman Optimistic

The President said he was convinced that if both sides read the report "with an open mind, it can provide a basis for renewed negotiations looking toward a prompt settlement."

The board said the nine-cent hourly wage increase offered by the packers was "substantial." The board did not offer an opinion on whether the offer was sufficient under present economic conditions. The union demands a 29-cent hourly increase.

The board said the industry could have been "more flexible in its attitude" toward the union's demands.

Its report dealt mainly with an argument between the management and the CIO union on the proper standards for judging the merits and needs of a wage increase.

Budget Is Main Issue

Their main issue was a "city workers' family budget" prepared by the Bureau of Labor statistics.

The union used the budget as a yardstick in asking for the 29-cent increase. The companies contended the budget approach was not a proper criterion.

The board held that the budget approach was invalid and unprecedented. It said that before it could be properly applied to the strike there would have to be more information.

The board said it was unable to make a sound observation now on the probable effect of wage increases in the meat-packing industry because "third-round increases" in other key industries are pending.

The question whether the Government should seek an injunction in the strike under the Taft-Hartley Law was considered by Ching and Presidential Asisstant John R. Steelman.

The Government could seek a strike-halting injunction under the law if it found the walkout threatens to imperil national health or safety. An injunction under the law would be effective for about 80 days.

Resort Hotel Executives Fill Jobs During Strike

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 9 (AP).—A strike of maintenance employes at the Greenbrier Hotel went into its second day with executives filling in when needed.

Formal opening of the resort, planned for April 19, was not expected to be affected by the wage dispute which also has idled workmen engaged in remodeling activities.

These workmen refused to cross picket lines of maintenance workers of Union Local 1182 (AFL) management and union representatives met to attempt to settle the dispute.

A number of guests are at the hotel for a preview of the renovation of the Greenbrier, which was used as an Army general hospital during the war.

They included Governor Meadows and Robert J. Bowman, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, who were served dinner last night by hotel executives functioning as waiters.

Electric power is being obtained from the city of White Sulphur Springs after a shutdown of the Greenbrier's generating plant.

Trucker Strike Idles 14,000 in Rubber Firm

Akron, Ohio, April 9 (U.P.).—Some 14,000 employes of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. were idle today following the walkout yesterday of 400 intra-plant truckers.

Company officials said the truckers left their jobs in sympathy with a trucker who was suspended for seven days without pay for refusing to operate an elevator to transfer stock.

Cut Ordered In Rail Travel

plained, are Diesel or electric powered, and hence not affected.

Elsewhere it was a different matter, however. The Association of American Railroads estimates that about 67 per cent of the Nation's freight traffic is hauled by coal-burning locomotives.

But 25 per cent of that was the haulage of coal itself, which has already been cut by 75 per cent. And other freight traffic has also been reduced, due to the industrial repercussions of the strike. Thus, an AAR spokesman believed, the cutback to 50 per cent will really affect only about 10 to 12 per cent of present freight traffic.

Most of the consequences will be felt in the East, he said. In the West, a larger proportion of the locomotives are fueled by oil.

He added that the affect on passenger traffic could not be estimated immediately. It was probable, however, he said, that the most severe cutback would be on branch-line service.

Meantime, the Federal Power Commission began yesterday to consider the possible effects of the strike on electric utilities. It sent telegrams to 116 companies which depend largely on coal for the generation of power, asking them to estimate their consumption next week, and to state what conservation measures they were taking.

Lewis' petition to court yesterday was a challenge to the operators' request for the appointment of a new trustee. His lawyers wrote:

1. The court lacks jurisdiction over the matter because the union-operator contract does not provide for the court to step in on a failure to agree on a third trustee.

2. Even the Taft-Hartley law gives the court power to appoint an "umpire" to settle disputes between the two trustees, not to name a trustee.

3. There is no dispute which an umpire could settle.

4. Van Horn, the operators' trustee, had no right, under the law or the contract, to request the court to name another trustee.

Power Ration Decision Delayed in Virginia

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today delayed action on possible power rationing in Virginia.

This decision came after the Virginia Electric and Power Co. reported to the SCC that a critical fuel shortage brought on by the soft coal mines shutdown had eased in the past 24 hours for Vepco

After a one-hour session, the SCC announced that its hearing would be continued until 10 a. m. Wednesday, as to Vepco only. It had been suggested the SCC might order power rationing as of midnight Sunday.

In a formal request to continue the hearing, W. E. Wood, vice president of Vepco, said his company is aware that "we still face a very serious situation if the strike should continue."

The company feels, however, he said, "it would be the safe thing and the proper thing to request an additional conference with the commission on Wednesday, at which time we think we will have specific information to know whether we can avoid rationing or whether it will have to be put on."

Hunting Violation Costs Mayor $25

Elkton, Md., April 9 (AP).—Henry A Mitchell, Mayor of Elkton, was fined $25 in Federal Court today for violation of duck hunting laws.

He was among 16 defendants who were tried by Judge William C. Coleman after a rigid enforcement drive by game wardens.

Mitchell and Frank W. Macmillan, Elkton businessman, were charged in the same case with shooting over a baited area in Cecil County.

The Mayor testified he thought the corn used as bait had already been consumed before he and Macmillan hunted in the area.

A $25 fine also was levied on Macmillan.

Railway Union Votes to Strike On Wednesday

Philadelphia, April 9 (U.P.).—A strike of 10,000 firemen and hostlers on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, postponed once at the Government's request, was set again today for Wednesday.

The new date was set by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen after negotiations sponsored by the National Board of Mediation broke down here yesterday.

Originally, the walkout of firemen and hostlers was scheduled for last March 31, but was deferred indefinitely when the Government offered to mediate the dispute over the hiring of firemen for Diesel locomotives in yard operation.

Conferences began in Washington and later were transferred here, but no agreement was reached.

The strike itself actually could be delayed 60 days beyond the 6 p. m. deadline next Wednesday if President Truman appointed an emergency board to study the dispute under the Railway Labor Act.

The fact-finding board then would investigate and report to Mr. Truman within 30 days. A walkout could not be called until 30 days later.

7 Milwaukee Breweries Face Strike in Wage Row

Milwaukee, April 9 (AP).—CIO brewery workers at all of the seven breweries in the Milwaukee area have voted in favor of a strike, a union spokesman said today.

E. P. Finley, business representative of Local 9, said the vote was 5084 to 282. The union has a membership of about 7000.

Authority to call the strike is vested in the union's executive board which is scheduled to meet tonight. The union has requested a 40-cent per hour wage increase. The brewers' bargaining committee has offered 12½ cents.

The breweries involved, the spokesman said, are Schlitz, Blatz, Pabst, Miller, Independent, Capitol and Gettelman.

World Health

There came into being on Wednesday a new instrument of the United Nations, the World Health Organization, created to combat an enemy of all mankind. The charter of the organization has been ratified by the one more than 26 nations necessary to bring it officially into operation, the last signatories being the Ukraine, Mexico and Byelorussia. The member nations will endeavor cooperatively to limit the incidence of disease and the spread of epidemic and to work toward the conquest of such scourges as malaria and tuberculosis. But the United States will not be among them.

Why will the United States not participate in so exemplary an undertaking of the United Nations? It is not because the Senate has misgivings about the matter; a bill providing for American adherence to the WHO was passed by the Senate unanimously last year. It is not because of any reluctance on the part of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, the appropriate legislative body of the lower chamber; that committee studied the bill and recommended its adoption, also unanimously. The majestic interdiction was imposed by five men—men with no mandate to pass upon this subject and with no particular competence respecting it—who simply took advantage of their strategic position on the House Rules Committee to forbid consideration of the subject by the House as a whole. They do not even represent a majority of the Rules Committee which has 12 members and voted last month 5 to 2 to table the world health bill.

The absence of the United States from the WHO is the more anomalous and absurd since this country took a leading part in setting up the organization just as it has traditionally taken a leading part in the promotion of public health. The American failure to play a part in the common struggle against pestilence must inevitably prove hurtful to American prestige and American pretensions. That failure will, of course, seriously cripple the newly established organization which naturally looks to this country for financial and technical assistance. What is even more serious, it will yield a pawn to the Russians in the struggle for the minds of men—letting them seem to be the cooperators while we assume the role of obstructors. The House of Representatives can best undo this injury by overriding its Rules Committee without any more delay.

Tardy Action

The executive order suspending all sales by the War Assets Administration of surplus industrial plants and machine tools for a 30-day period has been issued belatedly. For about 1500 war plants have already been disposed of and only 300 remain unsold. Eighty plants have been sold with the stipulation that they shall be maintained in a condition permitting of their reconversion to defense use on 120 days' notice, and 70 plants, still in the possession of the War Assets Administration, are being offered for sale under the same conditions. The present order, therefore, affects only a very few plants, some of which have been partially dismantled or have deteriorated to the point of being no longer potentially useful to the Government. The temporary stop-sales order merely insures a more careful scrutiny by the Munitions Board of these remaining assets to make sure that no plants which might be needed for national defense purposes are disposed of without attaching conditions for their future use in an emergency.

Congress and the Administration have been criticised for not acting sooner to prevent the scrapping or conversion of defense plants to civilian use. But it should be remembered that the threat of war and the need for rearming took us unawares. Until quite recently all our efforts have been directed toward speeding up reconversion, sloughing off wartime controls, and getting Government-owned war plants and equipment in the hands of private citizens. The emphasis was put on quick sales to facilitate the transition to a so-called normal peacetime economy. Criticism of the officials in charge of surplus property sales has heretofore been attributable largely to delays in assembling and releasing materials in short supply, and dissatisfaction with pricing policies and procedures. Congressional committees moreover have been concerned primarily with probing into charges of unfairness and fraud and studying defects in the organizational set-up and the administration of the surplus sales program.

Recognition of the fact that the needs of the defense program have been overlooked in the drive to get Government surpluses into private hands has come too late to repair the damage that has been done. In our opinion, that is nobody's fault, since neither Congress nor the Administration could reasonably be expected to have foreseen that the United States would be embarking on a large-scale rearmament program little more than three years after the end of the Second World War.

Pulling Together

A governmental device of increasing popularity was put to good use in the Foreign Assistance Act. We refer to the joint Senate-House committee created to receive reports from the administrator of the European Recovery Program, to watch the progress of this new venture in foreign policy and to spearhead the movement for further essential legislation. The Senate had approved a joint committee on foreign economic cooperation to be composed of seven members from each house of Congress. The House had discarded this and provided that the administrator should keep four different committees—the committee dealing with foreign relations and appropriations in each house—informed as to his activities. A serious waste of time and effort would thus have been imposed upon the key official in this great undertaking. Happily, that burden was avoided when the conference committee devised a joint "watchdog" committee composed of three members from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, three from the House Foreign Affairs Committee and two from each of the Appropriations committees.

This seems to us an admirable device. It centers responsibility for legislative guidance of ERP in one group. It should tend to coordinate the activities not only of the two houses of Congress but also of the legislative and appropriating arms of each house. Here is a central group of informed legislators, moreover, with which the President and the ERP administrator can consult with at least some degree of assurance that it will reflect a cross-section of congressional views. Indeed, it appears to us that the naming of this joint committee is a notable advance toward more responsible government so far as foreign policy is concerned.

With this constructive turn of events, we assume that the Herter Committee will be disbanded. When this special House committee went abroad last year to study the needs of European countries for postwar assistance from the United States, it did excellent work. The experience of its members and the information and reports they brought back account in no small measure for the successful enactment of the Foreign Assistance Act. In the final shaping of this legislation, however, the committee was less useful. Its efforts to put its own special imprint upon ERP, even though the legislation was being directly handled by the standing committees on foreign affairs, probably created unnecessary controversy and diffusion of effort. We cannot help thinking, moreover, that the committee itself was somewhat carried away by the undirected zeal of its staff. The staff's voluminous reports were not effective because they were not directly related to what Congress was doing in this sphere.

In spite of the committee's good work in arousing the House to the necessity of going to the aid of free Europe, we think its experience in general strengthens the case against special committees. Whether the task is investigative or legislative, it can usually be best performed by a standing committee. And when the standing committees of both houses can pool their common interest in a field of policy making through the mechanism of a joint committee, the hope of securing good legislation with a minimum of delay is greatly enhanced.

Enforcing The Law

President Truman's announced intention to enforce the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act is not particularly reassuring. For by this time it has become quite apparent that the law on which the President relies is a very feeble weapon of coercion. The President has done all that he can for the time being by requesting an injunction to force the miners to return to work. He cannot prevent John L. Lewis from resorting to delaying tactics by defying a court order. Nor can he drive the miners back to work. Even if the Government wins its fight for an 80-day injunction against Lewis and the union, and the miners and the strike in order to escape penalties for contempt of court, there is nothing to prevent another walkout at the end of the 80-day period, if a voluntary settlement is not reached before then. The President's powers of intervention are limited under the Taft-Hartley Act to reconvening the board of inquiry that has already made a report on the causes of the dispute and making this second report available to the public. The National Labor Relations Board is also ordered to take a secret ballot of employes to determine whether they wish to accept the final employer offer of settlement. If they reject the proposal, there is no legal hindrance to striking.

If the President had the power to seize the mines, he would be in a position to put pressure on the miners as well as the operators to come to terms. For Government seizure would not only entail dispossession of the mine owners but would make strikes unlawful and subject strikers to penalties. The mere threat of exercise of such powers would probably be sufficient to keep the mines in operation. The danger of a second coal strike emphasizes the importance of strengthening the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, not at some future time but at once.

Inflation Portents

The President's Council of Economic Advisers has recommended a program for dealing with inflation, which includes price control and rationing, to be applied when and where needed on a selective basis, with restricted control over wages in controlled areas. Particular emphasis has also been put on the need for controlling materials in scarce supply owing to the impact of ERP and preparedness demands. The council members are not only agreed that the danger of inflation is still with us, but Dr. Nourse declares there is now greater need of the stand-by controls powers the President has requested than there was last November.

That conclusion seems well warranted for, in addition to the recovery program, the expanded armaments program will make unexpectedly heavy demands on the economy at a time when productive activity is at a high level and shortages of basic materials needed both for foreign aid and rearming still exist. As pointed out in the National City Bank's April review of economic conditions, the country's resources in plants, materials and labor are for the most part fully employed, especially in case of metals and other strategic materials. Hence the new armaments program is likely to have an influence out of all proportion to its absolute size by diverting scarce goods and scarce labor from production of consumer goods. The labor force, moreover, will be depleted to the extent of prospective increases in the size of the armed forces.

As a result, the outlook is for a continued high level of industrial activity that will sustain consumer demands, together with greater concentration on types of production that do not minister to consumer needs. It follows that the fears of deflation engendered by the February market break have vanished, and the danger of inflation has again become a matter of serious concern not only to the President's economic advisers but also to many economists who were recently predicting an early business recession.

Who's A Militarist?

One of the most ancient of totalitarian precepts may be roughly paraphrased as, "Accuse the other fellow of precisely what you yourself are doing." This is a rule which Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko has followed with unflinching devotion in his endless diatribes against the United States in the United Nations. American Delegate Frederick H. Osborn turned the trick rather neatly on Mr. Gromyko the other day, however, when the latter accused the United States of "wrecking" attempts to carry out the disarmament resolution adopted by the General Assembly. The Soviet Union, Mr. Osborn pointed out, last year spent approximately twice as much of its gross national product on armaments as did the United States.

This is a fact that cannot be countered by the typical Gromykoan response that Mr. Osborn's statements were those of a "school boy" and that "it is no secret which countries are leading the arms race." Admittedly it is difficult to get specific figures on Russian armaments. The reason that Russian statistics are always couched in generalities is a deliberate effort, one may suspect, to mislead outsiders. Mr. Osborn gave as his source unofficial publications which stated that in 1947 Russian military spending came to "one eighth of its gross national product and one seventh of its national income." American military expenditures, on the other hand, amounted in 1947 to one sixteenth of the national product. Assuming that the Russian armament program has not diminished, even the anticipated increases in the current American military budget will leave our expenditures proportionately far under the Russians'.

This is the sort of information that ought to be picked up and exploited in our broadcasts to other countries subjected to the Russian propaganda barrage. It ought to be directed, too, with particular point, toward those fuzzy-thinking Americans who have fallen for the Kremlin line that the United States is engaged in "warmongering." The plain fact of the matter is that the Soviet Union is a military and a closed state—and we don't know which is worse from the standpoint of international relations.

Yet diamonds

Virginia Poll Tax

Your issue of March 29 contains a letter by John C. Pennell about the pending amendment to the Virginia constitution to abolish the poll tax as a requirement for voting. He points out that this amendment contains other provisions which will impose new burdens on the voter; namely, a series of unreasonable impediments in the way of registration.

Mr. Pennell, however, did not mention what may turn out to be the worst provision of all. The pending amendment says that a voter must "meet such tests as to literacy and such further requirements as the General Assembly may prescribe." If this amendment is adopted, the General Assembly will be handed a blank check to prescribe any voting requirements it sees fit, subject to a few restrictions in the State and Federal constitutions. They could, for example, restrict the right to vote to persons born in Virginia who are six feet tall and have 32 natural teeth.

This amazing delegation of power to the General Assembly violates the fundamental principle that a constitution (whether of a State or a social club) ought to tell who can vote under it—this is, in fact, one of the most fundamental things to be expected of a constitution. Because of this provision, as well as the features which Mr. Pennell denounces, the liberal voters of Virginia have been seriously considering whether to support or oppose this so-called amendment "to repeal the poll tax." It is a question of trying to select the lesser of two grave evils.

To date, a number of organizations, including the Arlington Better Government League, have voted to support the amendment, in the hope that it won't be as bad as it might be, and hoping that it will be easier to get something better later on.

H. HERBERT HOWE,
Secretary, Arlington Better Government League.

Reasoning On Palestine

In their column in your issue of February 27, Joseph and Stewart Alsop opposed the partition of Palestine on the ground that ". . . Taking responsibility for enforcement of the U. N. General Assembly's recommendations means asking Congress for authority to send an American force to Palestine, perhaps requesting partial national mobilization in order to provide such a force, and risking a resulting sordid outbreak of racial feeling in this country."

If any force were to be sent to Palestine, the Messrs. Alsop would have liked it to consist of Americans only so as to obviate the necessity for Soviet troops. It was their inability to see where these American soldiers would come from that apparently induced them to oppose partition.

In your issue of March 26 the Messrs. Alsop again write on the Palestine problem. This time they seem not to attribute the abandonment of partition by the Administration to the lack of American troops, but to the desire "to prevent Russian troops from being sent to Palestine, or Russian influence spreading to the Middle East."

Once more the prospect of sending American troops to Palestine is faced by the Messrs. Alsop, but now this prospect leaves them fairly unperturbed. It would seem that sending American troops to Palestine to restrain and hold down the Jews would not be too objectionable; it is only sending them there to uphold the United Nations decision for a Jewish State that apparently would be reprehensible.

This is rather odd reasoning to which, I feel, your readers' attention should be called.

CARL HERMAN VOSS,
Chairman, Executive Council, American Christian Palestine Committee.

Military Strength Now

The task of 1948 is to help Russia decide against the adventure of seizing more European territory. The only way to help her in her great travail is to let it stand clear that we will oppose it with military force. Let them know—know, not guess—that we mean to keep the still free countries of Europe from becoming a Russian springboard against North America. Instead of telling the newspapers, let our Government tell all the governments concerned.

Furthermore, the moral austerity shown just by the adoption of UMT and the draft would wet-blanket Russian rambunctiousness far more than placing orders for planes to be delivered after they had confronted us with a continentful of faits accomplis.

I am not decrying a big Air Force. Quite the contrary. But I do say that unless we take concurrent steps to train a respectable number of men, we jeopardize the battle of 1948. It would be unfair to put temptation in the Russian mind to knock off our European outposts while they still have the relative landpower to do it.

The best chance for us to build up Europe, and eventually the peace, is to make a military impression on the Russian mind—in 1948, not 1950. Unless told in language they can understand, the Bolsheviks could dream up our reaction as: "Oh, well, you have taken Norway and Denmark, but just you dare to come over here!" In this dream we would then sit down and build planes while European democracy was being expertly caponized a la Russe.

"Negroes In The Draft"

In your editorial of April 2, "Negroes in the Draft," you use the expression: "Mr. Randolph's essentially cheap appeal."

I have come to have a very high opinion of Mr. Randolph's dignity and strength. His leadership of the march on Washington movement seemed to inspire restraint among his own people and the full respect of President Roosevelt. This was under conditions where anyone capable of a "cheap appeal" would probably have failed entirely in guiding his followers into effective nonviolent protest.

Philip A. Randolph is a firm defender of democratic principles and practices against those who would provoke expressions of resentment against racial injustice. Against such enemies of our national solidarity this country needs all the leadership it can marshal in these days. I suggest that Mr. Randolph is drawing attention to a danger to us (at a time when it still can be removed) which cannot be met by UMT or the draft, and that either of those measures will actually make us more vulnerable to communism if they do not abolish the official practices of segregation and discrimination in the armed services.

U. S. Art Abroad

I was very pleased to see that the German art exhibit was going to stay in this country. I was even more elated to hear that congressional action was being taken.

However, I think we are missing out on a greater opportunity. Why can't we Americans send over to Europe, Germany included, a typical American exhibit? Why not give them a chance to study and witness the product of American art? Paintings by Thomas Benton, Charles Burchfield, John Stuart Curry, and Grant Wood and others might serve to enlighten Germans on our culture. Surely, the people over there need food, but they also need encouragement, understanding, enlightenment to keep their souls and minds from growing corrupt.

Greek Children As Immigrants

Congress has begun to hear appeals from the American people, and particularly from Americans of Greek descent, for the taking of special steps to meet with one of the gravest problems that has ever confronted a civilized nation—the problem of the potential loss of its national existence and birthright because of the brutal theft of its children.

The facts have been obvious before the eyes of the world for many months now. Under the direction of General Markos and his Communist terrorists, the Red Balkan bloc of Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia have aided and abetted the abduction of some 15,000 Greek youngsters from the Greek homeland, and have made intensive plans for the stealing of 25,000 more. The consequences of these deeds of horror have been apparent, too, by terror that has struck the hearts of every Greek parent, who has hastily sent his children, insofar as possible, away from Communist-raided areas into the already overcrowded cities of the ravaged Greek peninsula.

This forced mass migration of children has served to aggravate the worst problems of overcrowding, disease, malnutrition, which has so much complicated the actions of the Greek people in trying to meet the Red menace. Meanwhile, the youths already abducted behind the Communist iron curtain are heading for a life of training in Red doctrine, which will make them agents for world communism, enemies of their own fathers and mothers, to the church into which they were born, to the principles of liberty and freedom which have been always cherished by Greece.

Halfway measures will not avail before this terrible threat. Obviously, the United Nations must smash this Soviet sabotage within its ranks and take action against what has been characterized as genocide—that is, steps calculated to destroy an entire people through, for example, robbing a people of its children.

But on the doorstep of Congress itself lies the main solution of the problem, which can be taken by a number of means. Amendment of the displaced persons bill, S. 2242, now pending on the Senate calendar, is one means of action. Under this bill a total of only 100,000 displaced persons and orphans would be allowed to emigrate to America within the next two years, with special privileges given to farmers and citizens from the Baltic countries, leaving very little hope for Greek migration over and above the presently highly oversubscribed quota.

Such amendment as is proposed would permit the immigration, if only on a temporary basis, of as many Greek children as may be necessary under present circumstances, until the present Communist menace has been dealt with. These children could come into the homes of Americans of Greek parentage and, in addition, into other American homes, thousands of which would be eager to adopt these youngsters. Another way may be found to bring these children in the United States and place them in a special boarding school until the danger of communism in Greece is removed.

The well-planned diabolical scheme of the Communists can only be nullified by the removal of the Greek children to the United States. There is no other course open, because no matter where the children can be removed in Greece, unfortunately, Communists exist, in sporadic parts, everywhere—even in the islands.

Health Isolationism

By Malvina Lindsay

Nationalistic Germs

FROM NOW ON we are to concern ourselves only with made-in-America disease germs and fear psychoses. Those of other nations need not alarm us. For will not our oceans be Chinese walls to keep us free from the spread and effects of "foreign" cholera, influenza, smallpox, malaria, tuberculosis, venereal disease, human hostility, aggression, mass neuroticism?

What if plagues do rage in other parts of the world? We can hold relief drives for the sufferers. What if mentally sick or emotionally immature national groups start running amok? We can always vote—and pay for—a big armament program to protect ourselves.

To such an anachronistic attitude will we be committed if the House Rules Committee succeeds in blocking American membership in the World Health Organization, which has just come officially into existence. The committee's tabling of the bill to authorize this—which had been unanimously passed by the Senate and supported by the State Department—was another American body blow to the United Nations just as that organization's morale was at its lowest ebb.

If this country doesn't join the 26 other nations, including the Soviet Union, that have now signed up unconditionally, the Health Organization will have to abandon much if not all of its worldwide preventive physical and mental disease program now getting under way.

THAT PROGRAM held great vistas of hope for the generation of tomorrow, even some for the war-ridden one of today. One of its plans was a global attack on venereal disease, which has greatly increased in most countries because of unstable social conditions resulting from war. WHO researchers had hoped that widespread penicillin treatment of newborn babies might virtually eliminate venereal disease from the next generation.

Other plans included world-wide smallpox vaccinations, an influenza Scotland Yard to track down new types of this disease throughout the world, antiplague inoculations, more pooled research of world scientists on all forms of human affliction.

Medical teams of the organization have been working in Greece and Italy to halt rises in tuberculosis and malaria. In other countries medical workers have been seeking to prevent epidemics (and thus reinforce the Marshall Plan) by improving sanitation and training native personnel. Many students are training under the organization's medical scholarships. Recently Egypt was aided in controlling an epidemic of cholera that threatened to spread through the Near East—and further.

NOT SO widely known are the plans of the organization to tackle the world's diseased thinking—chief cause of war. Study groups of psychologists and psychiatrists throughout the world have been working on this problem in preparation for a world conference at which a program toward alleviating human fears and phobias was to be launched. Dr. G. B. Chisholm, widely known psychiatrist, director of the World Health Organization, has been especially interested in this undertaking. It was believed collective psychiatric knowledge and study might point the way to the development of more cooperative and less fear-obsessed nations.

Since human aggression and hostility present a worse threat to civilization than the atom bomb, any long-range peace measures need to be directed toward their cause and cure. Sick minds as well as sick bodies menace the peace of the world and the World Health Organization had hoped eventually to do something about both. It is one of the few United Nations organizations in which East and West were beginning to cooperate.

No official reason has been given by the Rules Committee for preventing the House from voting on the bill to authorize this country to join the World Health Organization. Certain members are reported to have been "afraid this country would have to foot the world's medical bills." The United States' share of the budget for the first year was to be 39.86 per cent—$1,920,000. This is a very cheap ounce of prevention if it would save some of the billions spent on fighting disease after it takes hold, and if it would point the way toward cutting down on the trillions of dollars the world armament race may soon demand.

"Latin Subversives"

I have read with great interest your editorial of April 3 entitled, "Latin Subversives."

I am in full agreement with the last part of said article in which you state ". . . communism finds its most fertile fields in pauper wages, squalid living and health conditions and lack of education. It is in these areas that the most effective resistance can be built."

As everybody knows, President Peron has raised the standard of living of the poor classes of Argentina, has improved the sanitary conditions of the country and has worked ceaselessly in order to eliminate poverty and misery, and to establish prosperity on a sound foundation.

It is for that reason that the editorial, "Latin Subversives," constitutes indeed a tacit admission of the great work that General Peron has done in Argentina. I wish therefore to express my heartfelt thanks for this tacit recognition.

Editor's note: The editorial also stated: "In several Latin-American countries they (the Communists) are allied with reaction . . . outwardly, at least, the Peron government in Argentina has been kind to them."

Unequal Tax Cut

A Communication

CONGRESS has passed the 1948 tax reduction law over the President's veto. The very substantial margin by which Congress overrode the veto would indicate that many Congressmen believed that this tax relief measure would provide the type of equitable tax treatment that we in America have endeavored to build into our tax structure. That is—taxing according to ability to pay. Or put it another way—granting relief where the need is most urgent.

Let us examine the tax reduction law and see if it meets this test. The President in his veto message stated:

"The tax reduction provided by this bill is inequitable . . .

"In the case of the income tax, nearly 40 per cent of the reduction would go to individuals with net incomes in excess of $5000, who constitute less than 5 per cent of all taxpayers.

"In the case of the estate and gift taxes, nearly all of the 250 million dollar annual reduction would go to only about 12,000 of the most wealthy families."

There can be no question that the central issue in consideration of tax reduction at this time should have been to provide relief to the middle and low income groups who have suffered most from inflation. Moreover it was on this group that a substantial part of the wartime tax burden was shifted. This shift, combined with runaway prices, has seriously undermined the purchasing power and consumption of the millions of wage earners who earn $5000 or less a year. The following table indicates the extent to which the tax load has been shifted onto these groups since 1939.

TABLE I.
Per cent of total income tax bill by income classes, 1939 and 1947.

*Income Class	1939.	†1947.
Under $2000	2.4	13.5
$2000-$3000	2.3	18.5
$3000-$5000	5.1	23.4
Total	9.8	55.4
$5000-$10,000	9.0	7.8
$10,000-$25,00	17.0	12.4
$25,000 and over	64.2	24.4
Total	90.2	48.7
Grand total	100.0	100.0

As the table indicates, the shift in the wartime tax burden resulted in the $2000-$3000 class having their share of the total tax burden increased almost nine times, while those in the $25,000 and over class had their share of the tax burden reduced by more than 60 per cent.

HOW DOES the tax relief passed by the Congress, and which the Senate Committee on Finance stated in its report "is heavily concentrated among taxpayers in the low income brackets," affect this drastic shift in the tax burden? The tax reduction among the 52 million taxpayers under $5000 amounts to 3.2 billion dollars or a little over $60 per taxpayer; the reduction for the 2.4 million taxpayers over $5000 amounts to 1.3 billion dollars, or a little less than $60 per taxpayer. In other words, when you examine the effect of the tax bill on a "per taxpayer" basis you find that the relief is not heavily concentrated among the lower brackets as the committee report states.

Moreover, as the President pointed out in his veto message, nearly all of an additional 250 million dollars relief in gift and estate taxes goes to 12,000 of the most wealthy families. The following table indicates the effect of the tax reduction bill on the distribution of the tax burden.

TABLE II
Per cent of total income tax bill 1939, and under new tax law.

*Income Class	1939.	†1948.
Under $2000	2.4	11.8
$2000-$3000	2.3	17.2
$3000-$5000	5.1	22.3
Total	9.8	51.3
$5000-$10,000	9.0	8.1
$10,000-$25,00	17.0	13.0
$25,000 and over	64.2	27.6
Total	90.2	40.7
Grand total	100.0	100.0

*After deductions but before exemption. †Estimated.

As a comparison with Table I will show, the effect of the new law is to reduce the under $5000 income taxpayers' share but slightly, with the result that it does not even begin to ease the drastic wartime weight of the tax burden of the low income groups.

UP TO NOW we have been analyzing the new law in terms of how the reduction affects the tax liability burden of the various income groups, and as we have seen the low income groups are still saddled with the war-imposed taxes.

Now let us examine the effect of the bill in ways which concern the average working man—the central issue—adjustment for the high cost of living. In other words how is the relief distributed in terms of added take-home pay? (The increase in spendable income.)

The following tables showing the increase in spendable income at various levels indicate clearly that the gravy goes to the upper brackets and the low income groups get the crumbs.

A single worker with no dependents gets an increase in spendable income of 3 per cent if he earned $2500, while a corporation executive, also single, earning one million dollars gets an increase in spendable income of 44 per cent, or almost 15 times as much. A married worker with two dependents earning $2500 gets an increase in spendable income also of 3 per cent, while the married bank president with the same number of dependents, earning $250,000, has his spendable income increased 58 per cent, or almost 20 times greater!

THIS TAX relief law must be appraised in the light of other substantial handouts already given our wealthy citizens. Congress removed the excess profits tax and refused to reimpose that tax despite the record of the greatest corporation profits in our history. Congress removed price control, which was the most equitable way of allowing all the people to get their fair share of goods. Runaway inflation resulted, harming most of all our lower income families. Now Congress has extended the income-splitting device which provides a substantial and disproportionate amount of tax relief to the relatively few American families who earn more than $5000 a year.

On top of all these special favors to the wealthy few comes the basic provisions of the tax relief law. As our analysis of the law's effects shows, the economic position of the upper bracket groups has been further enhanced at the expense of the millions of wage earners who bore the real brunt of wartime hardships.

When we consider that it has been the upper income brackets, represented largely by corporate management and dividend recipients, who have profited by the inflation and whose living standards have been least affected by the rise in living costs, it is clear that the disproportionate relief given them under this law does not meet the test of granting tax relief where the need is most urgent.

Virginia GOP Expects Fight At Convention

Roanoke, Va., April 9 (AP).—A vigorous floor battle between "young guard" and "old guard" Virginia Republicans over revitalization of the party loomed today for the GOP State convention here tomorrow.

One faction is led by northern Virginia Republicans, who want to give its area a larger representation on the State central committee and to make it easier to hold primaries in the various political components.

Two Arlington members of this group, Talmage Wilcher and Hal F. Hughes, predicted this morning that this clash between the old and young factions will be "the floor fight" of the convention.

Ready to Stay a Week

Wilcher, a former Roanoker who is now president of the Northern Virginia Republican Club and a member of the new State central committee, said his group is prepared to "stay here a week" if necessary to win its fight.

He said if the group is unable to get what it wants by vote or compromise, it stands ready to "filibuster" until tre opposition gives in. Filibuster speakers already have been appointed, he said.

Wilcher said that because of the strength of the Republican Party in the Eighth Congressional District, it deserves to have greater representation on the central committee. A solid block of some 279 votes from the district, he added, will work for this aim in the convention.

They will seek to rewrite the party plan to provide that each district should have one representative on the committee for every 5000 votes cast for GOP presidential electors in the preceding presidential election. Each district would have at least two members.

The committee now has two members from each district, one for each 10,000 votes cast in the presidential election.

Adoption of the northern Virginia amendment would give the Eighth District possibly six members and enlarge the size of the committee.

The second aim of the group, to provide for easier primaries, grows out of the overthrow of the "old guard" in a recent Eighth District convention and the decision to call a primary to choose a nominee to oppose Representative Howard S--ith.

Wilcher charged that the "old guard" has fought against primaries in an effort to keep "patronage" within a tightly knit group. Only by the Republican Party having primaries rather than conventions to nominate its candidates could Virginia hope to get a real two-party system, he said.

A Republican primary at the same time Democrats hold their primary, he said, would "ferret out" all the Republicans in Virginia and let the party know exactly who are its members.

Antilynch Bill Put High on Senate List

By The Associated Press

Republican Senators yesterday put a Federal antilynching bill, one of the key items in President Truman's bitterly contested civil rights program, near the top of their action list.

A meeting attended by 28 of the 51 GOP Senators voted to give the measure priority over such other legislation as a bill to ban the poll tax requirement in Federal elections and another to forbid job discrimination on race or color grounds.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) explained the members' preference for the antilynch bill: "If you've got a filibuster to fight, they thought that this was the easiest one to get through."

Taft said the antilynch bill, now before the Judiciary Committee, probably woul be ready for floor action in the next few weeks. Many of the Republicans plan to support a limitation on debate, which would prevent a filibuster by Southern Democrats.

The Southerners have prevented a vote on similiar legislation in past years by talking it to death. Antilynch legislation also is before the House, where the rules prevent a filibuster.

Both Senate and House measures would make it a Federal offense to take part in a lynching or, in the case of peace officers, to be negligent in preventing one. Offenders would be subject to trial in Federal courts.

5800 Register to Vote

Salisbury, Md., April 9 (AP).—Election officials today placed at 5800 the number of Wicomico County residents who have registered for the May 3 primary election.

They estimated about two thirds of 15,000 voters listed in the outdated registration books would re-register in time for the elections.

Two more days, next Monday and Tuesday, have been set aside to complete the listing.

Democrats Name Ticket

Winchester, Va., April 9.—City Democrats have nominated Harold Rowe, Carson Dettra, Percy Miller (incumbent), Claude Smalts, J. Lee Miller and Fred Brumback as candidates for six councilmen to be elected at the general election June 8. A Lee Coble, only other incumbent running for reelection was defeated.

Dr. C. R. Anderson who is finishing his fourth term as mayor and previously served eight years as a councilman, was unopposed in the Democratic primary.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Pressure On Eisenhower

ONCE AGAIN Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is caught in the crossfire of politics. Fighting a war with a diverse assortment of Allies was nothing compared to the intracacies of politics here at home.

Childs

It is quite clear that what happened to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Wisconsin has little or no bearon the future of General Eisenhower. In the common-sense judgment of the American people, there are generals and generals. One fact that makes a big difference is that Eisenhower is only 57 while MacArthur is 68.

On January 22 Eisenhower made public his letter to Leonard V. Finder, publisher of the Manchester (N. H.) Union-Leader, stating that he could not accept a presidential nomination. Having sent that letter, he felt like a man who has been delivered from a plague of boils. He believed he had taken himself out of consideration for good and all.

The latest Eisenhower boom is made up of at least three choirs of hopeful, not to say desperate, Eisenhower seekers. They are as numerous as before. They are clamorous and persistent.

THE FIRST group consists of those who believe that somehow the general can be prevailed upon to come to the rescue of the Democratic Party. Among them are party bosses who see overwhelming defeat ahead without him. They believe the Eisenhower name will be useful in sidetracking President Truman even if, in the end, General Eisenhower says "no" more firmly than before.

In the second group, and it may well be the most numerous, are those who have no connection with politics. They do have a sense of the perilous time we are living through and they long for a "big" man—someone above the ordinary considerations of party politics.

In the third group are those whose point of view would come nearest to prevailing on the reluctant Eisenhower. They feel that, if Mr. Truman is the only choice for the Democrats and if his fortunes continue at the present low ebb, the Republicans at their convention in June may go back to the pre-McKinley era to find a safe, sane, honest Harding who could never be suspected of any New Deal taint.

They argue that, if this should happen, then Eisenhower would feel compelled to respond to a draft from the Democrats, who meet three weeks later. After all, it is pointed out, he did in his letter refer to "some obvious and overriding reason" which might persuade a professional soldier to overcome his reluctance to run for political office.

Nomination by the Republicans of a Stone Age candidate would be such an "obvious and overriding reason." For one thing, so the argument goes, in a choice between Mr. Truman and the Stone Age man, a great many voters would be driven into the Henry Wallace camp. And if Wallace should get 10 million votes the masters of Soviet Russia would be convinced of a large body of American opinion sympathetic to Soviet aims.

THIS IS a potent argument. It would carry weight with General Eisenhower, however, who is thoroughly aware of the precarious balance by which the present so-called peace is held together.

The danger is that Eisenhower, bedeviled and harassed, will go even further than he did before in slamming the door on a nomination. That is the dilemma of those in the third group, which includes Republicans as well as Democrats.

Philip Murray of the CIO is for Eisenhower, but in all likelihood he will say nothing publicly for fear of forcing the general's hand. This same caution is holding back others on the liberal-labor side.

At the same time, however, they realize that the Eisenhower boom must be kept going with some guidance and assistance. Too much cannot be left to chance and to the natural appeal and popularity of the man.

Should the Republicans nominate Harold Stassen, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg or Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the general would not be likely to feel any compulsion to run. He could then follow his real inclination, which is to stay in the presidency of Columbia University and keep out of politics.

Republican friends are now putting pressure on Eisenhower. They are ridiculing the talk of nomination by the Democrats, telling him that this is the desperate expedient of a bankrupt party.

The arguers, pro and con, sometimes go so far as to come knocking on the door of the Eisenhower quarters at Fort Myer in Virginia. All this gets in the way of the general's present job, which is to write his memoirs. But that is one of the penalties of overwhelming popularity in an age of uncertainty.

Two Nearby Maryland Towns To Name 6 Municipal Officers

Six municipal officials will be chosen in two nearby Maryland towns on May 3 in local elections to be held simultaneously with State-wide primaries.

In Riverdale, voters will choose a town treasurer and three members of the five-man town council, while in Cheverly, two of the four council members will be elected. No contest has developed in either community, although candidates still have ample time to file.

Riverdale Town Treasurer, who has served for the last 25 years, has announced his intention to seek reelection, together with Councilmen Edward B. Dunford and F. W. Waigand.

As yet no candidate has filed for the second ward council seat now held by Henry H. Peck, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Nathan G. McKnew. Peck still is undecided whether to seek election to the post.

Candidates in Riverdale have until Wednesday at midnight to file their petitions with J. Power Waters, town clerk.

In Cheverly, no one has filed for either of the two council posts, although incumbent councilman, C. C. Kidwell, has indicated he will seek reelection. William A. Link, the other councilman whose term is slated to expire this year, has announced definitely he will not run.

Arlington Vote Record in Fall Is Predicted

As the May 1 deadline for payment of Virginia poll taxes neared, Arlington officials said yesterday they expected a record county turnout for next fall's presidential election.

They estimated the vote would run as high as 22,000, as compared with about 16,000 in the last presidential fight.

As one measure of the heavy expected vote, the treasurer's office pointed to the 35,000 Arlingtonians who have paid their 1947 poll taxes thus far this year. At the same time last year, only 29,355 had paid.

To be able to vote in the fall election, and in summer primaries, residents of Arlington, Fairfax, and Alexandria must have:

1. Paid their poll tax for 1945, 1946 and 1947 to their area treasurer's office before closing time on Saturday, May 1. In Arlington the office will be open from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. that day.

2. Registered for the general election before October 2, 1948, and for the August 3 primary before July 3

Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green pointed out that poll taxes can be paid by mail if assessed, but that the letters must be in his hands before the 4 p. m. closing time on May 1.

Fairfax Treasurer L. M. Coyner said a 6 per cent annual penalty exists in all Virginia areas on delinquent pool taxes. He estimated there were about 12,000 eligible voters in Fairfax County, with a turnout of about 6000 expected for the election.

In Alexandria, officials said about 15,000 were qualified to vote, with roughly 5000 expected at the polls.

New residents in the three areas are required to pay poll taxes only for those years during which, or part of which, they have been a resident.

Veterans are excused from payment of the tax for any year or part of any year during which they were in service, and also exempted from payment for the three years preceding their discharge.

of the State yesterday, making 30 speeches between them. The Tafts won't return but the Senator's Sunday morning CBS discussion with UAW President Walter Reuther will be broadcast in Nebraska Sunday night.

Dewey announced that his thirday extension of his tour was at the request of GOP State Chairman A. P. (Bert) Howard, who wanted him to enter the Panhandle section of the State. The hitherto neutral Howard denied this was an indorsement of Dewey.

Howard said Dewey had queried him on his itinerary. He said he replied that Stassen and Taft had both visited the Panhandle and "the people out here want to see you, too."

Trails Cross

Dewey and Stassen crossed each other's trails repeatedly today at Columbus, Fremont and Norfolk. Last night at Lincoln and again tonight at Omaha, they stopped at the same hotels.

On many hot local issues, Dewey was just catching up with Stassen and Taft, who had worked the State before. Like the other two, he came out for (1) development of the Missouri River Basin under the Pick-Sloan plan, and (2) more sail conservation and farm-price supports.

The invasion of Minnesotans for Stassen continued yesterday and today. One of the first to arrive was Pierce Butler, St. Paul attorney. Butler spent his time talking to top business executives, who are predominatly for Taft. He said he just wanted to assure Nebraskans of "the confidence the business community of Minnesota" has in its favorite son.

Gov. Youngdahl Helps

Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl of Minnesota arrived yesterday with Stassen and immediately started touring another section of the State. Youngdahl's principal theme was that Stassen "can fuse the extremes of this country." Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) arrived later, charged a "concentrated" effort to stop Stassen, and promptly launched his own speaking tour.

En route also was Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, (R., Wis.) who helped direct Stassen's Wisconsin coup.

These prominent Minnesotans already were on the scene and at work: Bernhard Le Vander, Republican State chairman; Roy Dunn, Republican committeeman; Mrs. Chris Carlson, National committeewoman; Elmer Ryan, Stassen's close friend and former law partner; George C. Jones, former State Republican chairman, and Mrs. Anne Stewart, president of the Minnesota's Women's Federation of Republican Clubs.

Truman Rights Stand Affects South's Rank-and-File Favor

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 9.—President Truman's avowal of an ominous civil rights program has adversely affected his popularity among rank and file of Southern voters.

In order to test the effect that this opposition to the program had had on the average Southerner's attitude toward President Truman, field reporters for the Institute asked this question:

Do you approve or disapprove of the way President Truman is handling his job as President?

The following table compares the attitudes of voters in the 13 Southern States covered in today's survey with the answers given by a similar cross-section in the same States last October:

Church Collection Aids Couple After Fire Sweeps Their Home

Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, 4th and B sts. se., this week became a Good Samaritan to a 19-year-old couple impoverished by fire.

We're more grateful than we can ever say," commented Axel Lindstrom in thanking the congregation for turning over last Sunday morning's church collection to him and his wife. That collection, and contributions from fellow-workers and anonymous persons, amounted to over $100, he said. Mrs. Lindstrom had just joined Metropolitan Church on Holy Thursday, March 25.

The fire that swept their rented rooms at 809 Kentucky ave. se., last Saturday afternoon left the Lindstroms with only the clothes on their backs. Wedding presents and other valuables were lost.

The couple is temporarily staying with Mrs. Lindstrom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Scott, 1631 G st. se. The Lindstroms soon expect to move to an apartment in Southeast Washington. The husband, a native of North Dakota, is employed at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department, with the rank of yeoman. He said Mrs. Lindstrom is expecting a child in October.

Sponsors of the "Y" cottage at 8410 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, have offered use of the building for community youth activities.

The services rendered by the USO for military personnel are being continued, with Miss Vera Periman as military director.

The cottage program is directed by Miss Polly Bullard, executive director of the branch YWCA. George McGill, assistant secretary of the branch YMCA, who has his headquarters at the cottage, and Joseph B. Bunker, executive secretary of the branch YMCA, direct Hi-Y and Tri Hi-Y functions.

Mrs. John H. Werner, chairman of the operating committee, has written to Bethesda-Chevy Chase organizations, suggesting ways in which the cottage can serve the area's young people.

Needed at present, she stated, is someone to be responsible for Sunday night suppers for Bethesda Naval Hospital personnel and provide light or thought-provoking entertainment.

"Angels" are also needed to underwrite free coffee for about a year, at a cost of about $300; to pay for newspapers, about $4.83 monthly; underwrite Wits and Bits, the monthly publication, at a cost of about $5 a month; provide place and orchestra for dances, and to furnish prizes for bridge and party games and refreshments.

Todd Shoots 67, Takes Lead in Masters With 139

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., April 9.—The Nats ended six weeks in Florida today and in case you missed the day-to-day developments, here's what happened:

They came up with nothing sensational among the dozen rookie pitchers who reported here on March 1. One by one the kids headed back to the Washington club's minor league plants with the exception of four who are being held for further observation.

POVICH

Young Dick Welteroth, up from Class B Bridgeport, Conn., club, may make it. He's an average-sized righthander with a fast ball and determination. Forrest Thompson, the 30-year-old draftee from Atlanta is a rare rookie southpaw with control and is being viewed as a relief man. Big Dick Weik throws a fast ball but couldn't win for Chattanooga and why he is being retained is vague.

The most interesting figure among the rookie pitchers is the inscrutable Cuban, Ramon Garcia, who hasn't done anything wrong yet in three assignments they've given him. He's non-English speaking but has more pitching poise than any of the others, and he's been getting everybody out.

MEANWHILE, the rest of the pitching picture has been pretty sorry. Guys like Early Wynn and Mickey Haefner have been getting their bumps in the exhibitions. Sid Hudson is now trying to get by with a new-fangled side-arm delivery, and has been doing rather well at it. Ray Scarborough and Chic Pieretti have been pathetic. Milo Candini appears to be crowding into a starting job. Walter Masterson only lately got rid of a sore arm.

The club's catching, rather skimpy when Al Evans was carrying the whole burden, is now supposedly solid. Jake Early's purchase from the Browns two weeks ago eliminated the panic in that department. The Nats think they have the two best-throwing catchers in the league, and they may have. Len Orkie is being retained as the No. 3 catcher. They don't know yet whether he can hit or catch.

Ken McCreight, the catcher from Charlotte didn't make it, but they think he will, in another year. For three days the club was going along with Andy Fleitas, a Cuban catcher, who looked like a hot article and may still be back from Chattanooga, but with the acquisition of Early he got a visa to the farm.

MICKEY VERNON continues to be the first baseman, but thus far his hitting has been unexciting and too reminiscent of his futility of last season. At second base, the Nats are happy about the whole idea of having traded Stan Spence for Al Kozar. They think they solved their second base problems for the next 10 years by getting the young man who brought a .339 batting average up from New Orleans.

Kozar threw a lock around the second base job almost from the first day he reported, and a week later he whacked Hal Newhouser for four straight hits, two of them doubles. In the field he has been reacting like a big leaguer on all kinds of plays, and his speed fits with Manager Joe Kuhel's new base-running emphasis. Eddie Lyons, who wasn't ready for the majors when he first reported to the Nats five years ago, apparently isn't ready yet.

At third base, the picture is just as bright. Eddie Yost is performing like a full-fledged star, and hitting the ball better than he ever did. He doesn't even have a challenger for the job. The more they try to bunt on him, the farther he throws them out. Third base wasn't one of the club's problems to start with.

BUT SHORTSTOP IS. Johnny Sullivan has been erratic this spring as he ever was, which was plenty. The Nats plan to open with him, but the betting is that Sam Meeks will have the job before June 1. Meeks is the new sensation of the camp since being imported from Chattanooga. All he does is hit and field and throw the ball like a big leaguer to the manner born, even if he is a little guy.

Sherry Robertson and Gil Coan are the big hopes of the outfield. Robertson has been a four-alarm wonder with his hitting in the Grapefruit League and his throwing has been sensational. He's thrown four men out at the plate in recent games. Trouble is, he's crude in the field, and has never had a good year at bat in the big leagues yet.

This is supposed to be Coan's year. He has everything to do everything with except a slight weakness of his throwing arm. Paradoxically enough, left-handed pitching doesn't appear to bother him. But summed up, he's still a gamble. Leon Culberson is playing center field. He's a good outfielder, who hasn't been any heavyweight batter. At the end of six weeks, the club is still looking for a good outfielder.

Kuhel Gives Coan Lecture As Nats Begin Trek North

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 9.—The Nats chugged out of Orlando tonight, train companions of the Phillies on a six-game trek toward home, with a lecture by Manager Joe Kuhel ringing in the ears of Outfielder Gil Coan.

Young Coan is now ready to return to the Washington lineup after a week on a twisted ankle, and will play against the Phillies tomorrow at Valdosta, Ga.; but with caution.

In a sentence, Kuhel told Coan all his foolishness on the bases, of the kind that precipitated the ankle injury the speed kid wrenched trying to take an extra base in an exhibition game, is of no importance whatsoever.

Previous to that Kuhel had been watching with some alarm as Coan whipped around the bases in the previous exhibitions, stealing home, and fleeing for an extra base at every chance.

"That's good stuff in the regular season, it's damfoolishness down here," Kuhel told the correspondents. "Coan could be a big guy for us. I think he's going to have a whale of a year. He can move lake nobody else in our league, and he looks ready to hit all kinds of pitching. When he's hurt, we suffer."

Coan was, indeed, big stuff, before he was lamed. He appeared to be the fellow who would give the club that extra lift, both at bat and on the bases. He's still no polished outfielder, but he has the speed to correct most of his mistakes of judgment, and he's sure-handed when he does get his glove on the ball.

Squad in Fine Shape

After a short morning workout today, the Nats broke camp without any kind of an ache or pain on the squad, and Kuhel pronounced it a wonderful six weeks. His sun-tanned, health-ridden crew shook the Florida sands from their feet and boarded a late train for Georgia and the North.

As for the club's biggest apparent weakness, the erratic play of Johnny Sullivan at shortstop, featured by four errors yesterday, Kuhel is somewhat tolerant.

"Sullivan hasn't looked good," he said, "but you have to make allowances for these hor ible Florida infields. They're murder. When he sees a big league diamond, I think it will be different."

Meanwhile, he isn't too alarmed over the shortstop job, with young Sam Meeks in reserve. Little Meeks has been doing everything right, even on the horrible Florida infields, and he promises to lend some power to the batting order if he gets in there.

NOTES—Owner Clark Griffith beat the team out of Orlando today, grabbing an early train . . . There was a general exodus of club officials, players' wives and children . . . It was doubtful most of the spring at Tinker Field, where the players' off spring gathered in great numbers, whether Griffith was running a baseball camp or a kindergarten . . . From here in, the rookie pitchers will see little work, with Kuhel now prepping his regulars for their regular season assignments . . . The rookies rate higher in one respect. They all drew upper berths on the trip North, during which the club will sleep in pullmans for six nights . . . Two pitchers and an outfielder will be released within another month, to bring the squad down to the limit of 25.

Flynn Flings, Flails Hoyas To 16-1 Drubbing of Fordham

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown added to Fordham's discomfort on yesterday's chilly, windy afternoon, handing the New Yorkers a 16-1 drubbing in the first of a two-game series at Medical School Field.

Right-hander Tommy Flynn, 19-year-old soph, had an easy time chalking up his third straight victory. He held Fordham to five hits and almost matched the total by leading the free-swinging Hoya batsmen with four hits of his own in five times at bat.

Joe Judge's boys put the game away in the third and fourth innings when they paraded 20 men to the plate. After scoring seven runs in the third to make it 9-0 against starter Jim Arbucho, Fordham's top pitcher, they teed off on Walt Suchowiecki for five more runs in the fourth.

In that seven-run inning, Joe DiLeo and Elmer Raba each singled two runs across. The big fourth was featured by doubles by Joe Connors, Raba and Al Naples.

Raba, busy centerfielder with five putouts, had three hits and two walks in six times at bat. He and Catcher Johnny Moskal each batted three runs across.

The loss was Fordham's first in three starts and made Georgetown's record 5 and 2. The teams play again 3 p. m. today—and Georgetown can hardly wait.

Crisler Leaving Michigan? He Decides Today

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 9 (AP).—The elusive answer to rumors that Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler will resign his post as athletic director at the University of Michigan to enter business was just around the corner today.

Crisler, who has maintained a firm "no comment" defense for a week behind the flurry of rumors that he is headed for a $50,000-a-year job with a manufacturing firm, said today he would issue a statement at 10 a. m. Saturday.

Close observers construed that as a sign Crisler is leaving the Michigan athletic picture after 12 years. But whether Fritz's announcement would be that he is severing his Wolverine ties, or that he is staying on, remained a matter for much discussion.

Three weeks ago Crisler stepped aside as Michigan's head football coach and turned the reins over to one of his aides, Backfield Coach Bennie Oosterbaan.

Insiders felt then that Crisler was paving the way for complete departure although he retained the post as athletic director, one he has held for seven years since taking over from the late Fielding H. Yost.

Last week Detroit newspapers pitched in on a seemingly reliable report that Crisler had accepted a business position with a manufacturing firm that would pay him more than three times the $14,500 annual salary he earned at Michigan. Rumors insisted that Fritz would give up his athletic post here by the end of April.

Harmon Has Another 70, Trails Texan By 1 Stroke

By Chick Hosch

Augusta, Ga., April 9 (AP).—Harry Todd, a gangling young pro who has won only one event of any importance, today paced the classy field in the twelfth annual Masters Golf Tournament by a stroke at the halfway point with a 139.

Todd, 31, pro at the Northwood Club in Dallas, Tex., fired a 5-under-par 67 on the 6800-yard National Country Club course for the best round of the two days play.

Claude Harmon, also 31, matched Todd's 33 going out, but came back in 37 for his second straight 70. Harmon had an eage 3 on the long second hole, 535 yards, by putting his second shot 6 feet from the pin.

Chick Harbert posted a 70 for a total of 141, the same as Ben Hogan, who finished with 71 today by firing a 3-under-par 33 on the second nine. Harbert had 35, 35—70.

Mangrum Slips to 73

Lloyd Mangrum, the year's leading money winner who paced the opening day field of 57 by a stroke in this $10,000 event, shot a 73 today for a 142 total and a tie with such stars as Bobby Locke, the South African ace who made his American debut here.

Locke had rounds of 35-36 today for his second straight 71, but missed a chance to move closer to Todd by going over par on the last hole. Jim Ferrier was another of the five pleayers who wound up with two under par for the two rounds. Ferrier had 71 again today.

Bobby Jones, local club president, soared to 81 today with a 41-40 card for his highest single round in competitive golf. That gave him a total of 157.

Todd, father of five children, is making his third tournament start of the year. A victory here would be his first since December, 1946, when he won the Orlando, Fla., Open.

Cotton, Demaret Tied

Henry Cotton, the English veteran who was even par yesterday, was one over par today as he continued to scramble his way over the tricky lay-out. He had 37-36 for a 73 and a 145 total, which tied Jimmy Demaret, the defending champion. Demaret shot a 34-38 today for even par 72.

Terps Invoke 'Chow Call' Curfew to Keep Ball Players From Being Moonstruck

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

ALTHOUGH HIS CLUB seems to be constantly involved in extra-inning games and his use of the two-team system prolongs an ordinary contest, Maryland Baseball Coach Burt Shipley has found it necessary, nevertheless, to decree a 5:30 deadline for College Park ball games. The reason: the university dining halls close at 6 p. m. . . . If the Washington Caps are inclined to be greatly indifferent to the outcome of the Philadelphia-Baltimore championship series you can't blame them. They licked Philly four out of six and downed Baltimore six out of eight during the regular season . . . One of the last to accept an invitation to the $10,000 specialists golf tournament at Virginia Beach next week was Byron Nelson, who suggested the tournament . . . Bill Rach, of Georgetown, will join the horsey set this summer. He's been named publicity man for the polo-playing people at Fairfield and Meriden, Conn.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S football coach, Bo Rowland says he can use three tackles, two fullbacks and a couple of ends, but admits his most pressing need at the moment is an apartment for Mrs. Rowland and their daughter . . . There were more general admission tickets (788) sold at the Turner's Arena wrestling matches Wednesday than at Monday's Graziano-Horne fight at Uline's where only 772 were available . . . Columnist Bob Considine refused to accept expense money for coming down from New York to address the Georgetown "G" club banquet the other night . . . Television of the Bowie races proved a boon to business in taverns and restaurants. Crowds can be found at most of the places not only watching, but also betting a bob or so . . .

"JIMMY LAKE IS what happened to vaudeville when it died," was the way Red Smith, of the N. Y. Herald Tribune, described our No. 1 fight announcer at Uline's last Monday . . . Smith evidently doesn't appreciate fight announcers. In his column he also suggested that Lake and "New York's Harry Balogh be locked in a room together and forced to introduce to each other." Graziano, incidentally, can't deduct the $5900 purse he contributed to the polio fund from income taxes. His contract called for him to receive only one buck, which he did, and the donation was actually a contribution of the Liberty Athletic Club . . . Morticians advertise in the strangest places. The Turner's Arena fight programs, for example, carry this in large, bold letters just under the evening bouts: "In case of death, call Chambers." . . .

Connie Hopes His Pitching Will Be Better

By Jack Hand

Clearwater, Fla., April 9 (AP).—Connie Mack is mildly disturbed about the slow start of his Philadelphia Aathletics' pitchers. With opening day approaching, only Phil Marchildon has approached his 1947 form.

"Our pitching should be better than last year," said Mack, "but right now it isn't. Bill McCahan had trouble with his arm. When we finally got the right kind of a day for him he looked very bad against the St. Louis Cardinals. Dick Fowler, too, hasn't come along as fast as we hoped.

"Everybody talks about our pitching staff. We have a great young left-handed prospect in Lou Brissie, but we hope to bring him along slowly."

The A's head North with only 25 players so they will have no worries about cutting down by mid-May. They're down to bed rock right now with nine pitchers, three catchers, seven infielders and six outfielders.

Mack figures on Marchildon, Fowler, McCahan and Coleman as starters with Carl Scheib and Rookie Lou Drissie as possibilities. Bill Dietrich will be reserved for spot duty whenever his arm is ready. And the bullpen will be manned by Bob Savage and Alex Kellner, a southpaw recruit from Birmingham, where he won 11 games.

Buddy Rosar is the No. 1 catcher, probably the best in the league. Fermin (Mike) Guerra will be his chief helper.

Ferris Fain, who reported this week after a series of knee operations, wasted little time getting into action at first base. When he's ready for full-time duty, Rudy York, picked up as a free agent, will be relegated to pinch-hitting chores. Pete Suder at second, Eddie Joost at short and Hank Majeski at third, all holdovers, round out the infield.

George (Bingo) Binks and Don White, drafted from San Francisco where he hit .292, will be the reserves.

Jocks Each Win 2 Races, Tied at 12

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., April 9.—Veteran Jockey R. J. Martin and Apprentice Ray Drury continued their merry battle for riding honors here today.

Each of the saddle artists rode two winners for the day so they go into the final program tied at 12 each.

Drury, a 17-year-old Annapolis, Md., boy piloted the winner in the day's feature, the Anchorage Purse, a claiming affair at a mile and a furlong. He was aboard A. J. Cochran's Gremlin and brought the 7-year-old home a length and a half in front of M. Prickett's Spanish Uhl with P. E. Albert's Rex Romandus third in the field of nine.

Gremlin returned $9 to his backers in a crowd of 11,000 and was clocked in 1:56 for the route over a fast track and under smiling skies. However, a strong wind whipped through the stretch during the afternoon.

Junior Four Scores

Drury rode his other winner abroad R. E. Vogelman, jr.'s Junior Four, a $6 favorite, in the fifth race. He had to keep the 6-year-old to the whip at the end to stave off E. H. Moody's Hy Spread and R. Finn's Hawkwood Aress. Junior Four paid $6.

Martin's first winner came on M. Folin's Erato in the second race. It was a thrilling battle to the wire with Martin's ability probably deciding. Erato paid $7 and put the finishing touches on a $61 daily double. Northern Trush, the favorite, was hurt in the starting gate and had to be withdrawn by order of the stewards.

The second winner for Martin was G. A. Lawson's Git in the seventh race. He sent the 5-year-old around horses and won going away from Mrs. C. Bowers' Aldridge and R. Hullings' Palist. Git, short on name, was also short on price, being a $5.80 favorite in a field of eight.

Incline Choice In Bowie Final

Bowie, Md., April 9.—Joe Tucci's Incline, twice a bridesmaid but not a winner here, promises to go postward in the favored role on Saturday's closing program.

The Washington-owned campaigner will not be called upon to face his two conquerors in the $10,000-added Southern Maryland Handicap but will have to carry top weight of 116 pounds.

A field of eight was named overnight for the test of a mile and a sixteenth with Incline drawing the outside post position. Incline was second to S. W. Labrot (jr.'s) Repand in the Rowe Memorial opening day and again was the place horse last weekend, following Clarence Hartwick's Flag Drill to the wire in the Bowie Handicap.

Chief opposition for Incline is likely to come from Flash Burn, a former stablemate. Owner Tucci purchased Incline from the King Ranch, along with other horses last fall.

Third choice is likely to be Isadore Bieber's Basileus 2d, who finished third behind Flag Drill and Incline in the Bowie. The $40,000 French importation should improve off that race.

Others in the lineup are Evening Flight, End of Strife, Bell-the-Cat, Petrol Point and Laboulaye.

Health Center Contract Let on U. S. Aid Basis

District Approves $81,060 for Gales School Conversion; Will Seek $27,020

District Commissioners yesterday moved toward securing Federal funds for a health center here, even as a new applicant took steps to benefit by the Hill-Burton Act for hospital aid.

The Commissioners approved an $81,060 contract for converting the old Gales School, 1st and G sts. nw., into a health center, contingent on congressional appropriation of $27,020 under the act.

At the same time, it was learned, Federal funds will be sought for completion of the Nichols Avenue Hospital and Clinic now being built at Forrester st. and Nichols ave. sw.

Dr. Henry G. Hadley, founder of the nonprofit institution, said yesterday he would apply "within several days" for $100,000 to match remaining funds of $200,000 for finishing the new 60-bed hospital. Some $100,000 already spent in its construction cannot be considered in application for funds under the act, Dr. Hadley said.

Contract for the conversion of the Gales School was awarded to Columbus Construction Co. of 805 G st. nw., lowest of eight bidders, it was announced. Archie Hutson, District director of construction, said work would begin in "the next three or four weeks" and will take about six months for completion.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said the converted structure would not "by any means" be adequate as a health center in the generally accepted sense of the term. He said it would provide for health offices now situated in the Acacia Life Insurance Annex Building.

Much of the space, Dr. Ruhland said, will be devoted to maternal and child welfare clinic service, with other accommodations for a pharmacy office and for school medical inspection specialists.

Federal grant for the Gales School project has already been approved by the District Health Department and the United States Public Health Service, the Commissioners explained. Congress, however, has not yet authorized appropriation of funds due the District under the Hill-Burton Act.

Dr. Hadley's application for aid under the act will be submitted to the District Health Department, which already has under consideration applications for $658,000 by Children's Hospital for that institution's building program.

The Hill-Burton Act authorizes Federal help of 75 million dollars a year for five years for hospital improvements throughout the country. The District share is $300,000 annually, for which applicants must put up $2 for each $1 sought. The District Health Department serves as clearing house for local requests.

Henry S. Gavens, Health Department budget officer, yesterday said the Children's Hospital request would be considered together with others that may be received. He said he expected the department to act on the requests "probably in June" and said it would be guided by recommendations of the Hospital Advisory Council, now studying District hospital needs.

Elsewhere on the hospital front it was learned that early construction work on the Washington Hospital Center, on Naval Observatory grounds, could be started with a $500,000 appropriation approved by Congress late Thursday and sent to the White House.

For Year

Assessment Postponed in Silver Spring

Postponement of residential property reassessment in Silver Spring for one year was announced yesterday by Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of assessments in Montgomery County.

Effective date of the new assessments will be May 1, 1949, instead of May 1 this year, as was planned, he said.

Allen explained that the reprieve, which has been approved by the State Tax Commission, was necessitated by "an unprecedented amount of building" and insufficient time to make the assessments.

The delay, which also applies to residential property in Takoma Park, Kensington, and Wheaton, will not affect the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area, where assessments are expected to be completed by May 1 this year.

Assessors' work in the four communities, which contain 26,000 pieces of residential property comprising the Thirteenth Election District, has been hampered by the record construction boom.

Allen explained that normally 12 months are allotted to complete the five-year reassessment, but this year only 10 months were available as a result of action by the 1947 session of the General Assembly, which moved back from July 1 to May 1 the date assessment books are closed.

Arlington's Population Now 123,832

Arlington has an official 1948 population of 123,832, the U. S. Census Bureau announced yesterday.

That figure will be followed shortly by a complete breakdown of child population by ages and of county housing, the bureau added.

The census, taken at the request of the Arlington School Board to make possible planning for future school development, cost $15,000.

The new population figure more than doubles the 57,040 counted in the last census of 1940. The 1920 count was 16,040, while population was 26,615 in 1930.

At the same time, the Arlington School Board announced it was taking steps to issue bonds for $1,776,000 worth of elementary school construction authorized in a referendum last May.

Retained to prepare for the issue was the law firm of Ball & McCarthy. At the same time, the board said its special school sites committee was studying the best location for schools to be built. The committee will employ detailed data of the 1948 census to reach its decision, the board added.

Novak Convicted Of $135,480 Embezzlement

Baltimore, April 9 (AP).—Frank Novak, jr., 35-year-old real estate operator, was convicted of embezzling $135,480, to end a trial that was enlivened on its last day by the ejection of two members of his family from the court room.

The jurors deliberated 1 hour and 1 minute. Sentence was deferred and Novak went to jail in default of $10,000 bond.

Novak, who during his trial gave testimony of losing more than $77,000 to gamblers, was accused of embezzling money from the construction company that bore his name.

The defense contended that the gambling losses represented money given to Novak by his foster mother, Mrs. Florence Novak.

As Novak left the court room, Mrs. Novak sobbed and called out to Judge Herman M. Moser, "don't sentence him, judge, please." Earlier Mrs. Novak and Novak's foster sister, Mrs. Albert Krasner, were ordered out for making comments.

Hospital Aide Gets New Post

John Anderson, 42, assistant administrator of Children's Hospital and a former merchant marine chief engineer, has been appointed new Arlington Hospital administrator, it was announced yesterday.

Anderson

He will replace Karl H. York, who resigns May 1 to take a similar post at a Racine, Wis., hospital. Anderson said yesterday he would assume his new duties on or shortly after May 1.

Anderson, who has been at Children's for the post 10 years, is a native of Jacksonville, Fla., and currently lives at 5021 Fulton st. nw.

He spent 17 years at sea as engineer and chief engineer for ships of the Ford Motor and Standard Oil Co.s, leaving that career in 1936 for a course in hospital administration at Chicago University.

Anderson came to Washington in 1938, worked for a year at Children's Hospital as its chief engineer, then stepped into his assistant administrator's position.

A member of the American Hospital Association, and the Maryland-District Hospital Association, he is a nominee to the American College of Hospital Administrators. He is married and has an 8-year-old daughter.

Lane Awaits U. S. Housing Report

Annapolis, Md., April 9 (AP).—Governor Lane is awaiting a report from the Federal Housing Expediter before taking action on new rent advisory boards for Maryland.

A Statehouse spokesman said Tighe E. Woods, housing expediter, advised the Governor he will study the membership of Maryland's five area boards set up under the 1947 rent control act.

Any personnel requirements of the new law could be retained on the boards, the spokesman said.

Boards were organized last year in Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frederick and southern Maryland. Members were recommended by the Governor.

Under the new control act, advisory groups must represent both tenant and landlord interests and the public.

Legion Lists District Conventions in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., April 9 (AP).—Dates for 10 American Legion district conventions to be held in June were announced today by State Commander W. R. Fugitt.

The constitution of the West Virginia department provides that such meetings must be completed at least 30 days prior to the State convention, which is scheduled August 13-16 this year.

June 6—Second District at Kingwood, and Ninth District at Parsons.

June 13 — Tenth District at Charles Town.

Democrats Plan Fairfax Meetings

Fairfax County Democrats will hold mass meetings in each of the county's six magisterial districts May 3 to elect delegates to a Democratic county convention May 10.

The county convention will name delegates to the State convention July 2.

County Democratic Chairman W. Franklin Gooding yesterday said candidates for the county convention must file with him by April 26. Winners in the district convention who wish to be candidates for the State convention must file by May 7, he said.

Girl's Appeal Stays Order to Go to Father

A 9-year-old girl's plea against being returned to her father and stepmother who "whips me" yesterday led the United States Court of Appeals to issue an emergency order temporarily holding up a District Court ruling taking the child from her mother.

The child, Alice Rae Steele, daughter of Mrs. Mabel Steele, 2070 Belmont rd. nw., and Charles Ray Steele, Cheverly, Md., made her plea in an affidavit presented to Chief Justice Harold M. Stephens and Associate Justices Wilbur K. Miller and E. Barrett Prettyman. Her parents were divorced in 1945 and her father has since remarried.

Under a District Court ruling April 6, the mother was to return the child to the father April 12 after losing a custodial suit. Yesterday's emergency ruling by the Court of Appeals stayed execution of that order and set a special hearing for April 26 in the case.

The youngster said in the affidavit:

"I am nine years old. I know what it is to tell the truth. If I tell a lie I will be punished. Last night I called my father on the telephone and told him I did not want to go to his home in Maryland because he had been beating me and he said, 'When you come out here the first thing I am going to do is whip you.'

"My father lives in Cheverly, Md., with my stepmother. My stepmother is very cruel to me and whips me. I was beaten with a razor strop in February and I sent for my mother. I am now living with my mother and I am very happy. I love my mother very much. I also see my grandmother often and I love my grandmother very much. I am getting along very well in school and I like all the other girls in school.

"If I have to go back to my father my father will not let my mother see me and will not let my grandmother visit me. I would have to be taken out of school if I go out there."

Steele, who operates a garage at the rear of 38 New York ave. nw., was sued for divorce on the grounds of adultery. Following the divorce, Alice Rae lived with her mother until March, 1947, when Mrs. Steele gave her to Steele. The grandmother, Mrs. Mary Thompson, lives at 1744 Q st. nw.

Alice Rae was returned to her mother's custody by Prince Georges County authorities following a court hearing last February in which the child's stepmother, Mrs. Frances Steele, was charged with assault on the youngster.

James J. Laughlin, attorney for the first Mrs. Steele, declared in his petition for a stay of execution that Justice F. Dickinson Letts permitted no testimony in the lower court hearing. The attorney contended the child should have the right to testify in her own behalf.

Cottage Cheese, Cream Price Cut Predicted Soon

Milk Costs Could Come Down, Too, Dairy President Hints at Hearing

Lower area prices for cottage and cream cheese this summer appeared certain yesterday after a hearing which also brought unscheduled sentiment for lower milk prices.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association told the Virginia Milk Commission, at a hearing in Alexandria, that the lower cream and cheese prices are required during May, June and July to meet competition from dairy products entering this milkshed from outside areas.

Representatives of four dairies not only agreed with this proposal, but Maurice V. Davison, vice president of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, largest in this area, said:

"We believe the price of Class I (fluid) milk should also be reduced by May 1; it would increase consumption."

Reduced in Other Cities

"Other cities, such as Philadelphia and Boston," said Davison, "are already making seasonal (milk) reductions. We believe that should have been part of the request for the hearings."

The hearing was called by the Producers Association solely to consider lowering the Class II (cream and cottage cheese) dairy price, said Dr. Tipton R. Snavely of the University of Virginia, commission chairman, and could not consider fluid milk prices.

T. Oscar Smith, one-time candidate for the Arlington County Board, and only "consumer spokesman" present, inquired into the "reasoning" behind a reduction only in Class II prices.

"We'd like to see a reduction in Class I milk, too," said Simth. He said after the hearing that he would make an effort to have consumers propose a hearing to consider lowering the fluid milk prices.

Cream $3.09 Less a Can

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which contracts with dairies to provide an estimated 80 per cent of milk consumed in Metropolitan Washington, sought the Class II reduction through temporarily discontinuing special premiums paid to farmers of 37 cents per hundredweight for milk placed in Class II.

R. H. Rawlins, production manager of Thompson's Dairy, said if a slightly higher "rough figure" is approved, his dairy could cut the price of light cream about 1 cent a half-pint, and 4 cents a quart. Heavy, or whipping cream, he said, could drop 2 cents a half-pint or 8 cents a quart, although other dairy costs are rising.

Davison said his dairy, under the proposal, could reduce light cream about one half cent a half-pint, and 3 cents a quart.

Area Milk Price Above Average

The area price for Class II milk has been "in excess of the general market level throughout the winter," said Davison. In October, he said, a 10-gallon can of 40 per cent cream on the Philadelphia market was $6.31 below the local price of $36.92.

Both he and Rawlins asked that the lower price remain in effect indefinitely, not just for three months. M. H. Burchell, secretary-treasurer of Alexandria Dairy, and H. F. Hall, representing Safeway Stores' Lucerne Milk Co., said they too would pass on any savings to consumers.

A decision in the case is due after April 14, date set for filing further briefs. While the Virginia Commission controls only Virginia prices, prices set there have become area-wide, as no other nearby section is controlled.

The Producers Association and its secretery-treasurer, and Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Alexandria, Richfield, Wakefield, Harvey's, Thompson's and Lucerne dairies have all pleaded not guilty to recent antitrust charges of conspiring to set milk prices and restrain trade. Trial is set for May 5.

False Pretenses Charge Holds Pair

Two men yesterday were held for grand jury action on charges of false pretenses, after one of them allegedly represented himself by telphone as a lawyer and sent the other to collect money to get a prisoner out of jail.

The men were Fred Williams, jr., 21, of 1022 8th st. nw., ordered held under $500 bond, and Peter Barney, 24, of 946 L st. nw., ordered held under $300 bond.

Police said on March 27, Williams telephoned William M. Galloway, president of the Diplomat Cab Co., and said he was a lawyer by the name of William S. Thompson, with whom Galloway had had some previous dealings. He asked for $75 to obtain the release from jail of a former cab driver, charged with larceny, they said.

Williams then sent Barney to collect the fee. Police were present when he got the marked bills, they said.

Wallace Backers Sue for Records

Baltimore, April 9 (AP).—The Progressive Party of Maryland filed a mandatory injunction suit in Circuit Court today in an effort to compel the Baltimore Board of Supervisors of elections to open registration books for inspection.

The suit, filed by John E. T. Camper, cochairman of the party, and Harold Buchman, executive secretary, said the organization was organized for the purpose of "nominating and assisting in the election of Henry A. Wallace" for President of the United States.

It explained the Progressives are engaged in circulating petitions in support of the nominations of its candidates. Since all signers must be registered voters, an inspection of elections rolls is necessary to make sure all signers are bona fide registrants, the injunction petition said.

The Progressive Party contended that the board promised to permit inspection after the registration rush but that such permission now has been denied.

The nominating petitions must be filed before April 18 if Wallace's name is to appear on the November ballot.

B.&O. to Drop 11 or 12 Trains

Baltimore, April 9 (AP).—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad said today that 11 or 12 trains will be discontinued and an unestimated number of employes would be furloughed when the Government order curtailing train traffic another 25 per cent becomes effective Wednesday.

As a result of the previous 25 per cent cut of steam locomotive service about 7000 B&O workers were laid off.

The main lines from Washington to New York and from Washington to Chicago and St. Louis will not be affected by the coal conservation order, officials said, since all locomotives on those lines are diesel-powered.

Postlude

Enthusiastic Crowd Hails Serkin's Art

By Paul Hume

Rudolf Serkin and music by just three composers turned Constitution Hall into a shouting mob of fans last night.

It was Serkin's first Constitution Hall recital, and he played Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin. Yet there was nothing on the program that could be termed familiar, and little that was not made important and exciting by virtue of the manner of its playing.

Serkin's technical assurance is public knowledge. It is both refreshing and reassuring to hear a pianist with so sound a concept of the structure of a work of music, and so firm a belief in the importance of its underlying rhythms. Serkin illuminates what he plays in much the same way that Sir Thomas Beecham makes a composer's intentions explicit: by absolute adherence to tempos, dynamics, and sonorities, paired with a sense of proportion which brings out the inner voices of a work.

Thus Serkin gave Beethoven's early fantasy the proper balance between improvisation and realism, allowing the Weber-like section to gallop along, while the quiet passages foretold of the wakening genius. The sonata in F sharp which followed was a vastly different matter. It is a wholly mature Beethoven; one who has achieved stylistic independence with the piano. The two movements of the sonata were permitted to make Beethoven's own contrast by a simple adjustment of pace, and a varied technique for the difference in figuration. It was a fine reading of a work we hear but rarely.

Franz Schubert's "Wanderer" Fantasy followed, played to perfection. Every line of its prescient architectonics was given nobly. The adagio, echoing tragic song that gives the work its name could hardly be more poetically sung. Serkin played with complete awareness of its implications, as if he knew that it was one of the world's masterpieces for piano.

The Chopin Preludes concluded the evening, plus the G Flat Etude and the great A Flat Polonaise as encores. In all these Serkin showed us his Chopin for the first time. Here was undeviating fidelity to the composer's markings; warm, unsentimental playing of a transcendent order. It was a great evening which ended only when pianist and audience all got up and left having worn themselves out in a wonderful excitement.

5 Virginia Bills Get Tuck's Pocket Veto

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP). — Five bills passed by both Houses of the 1948 General Assembly died today for lack of Governor Tuck's signature.

Senate bill 301, designed to establish a uniform interest rate between 2 and 4 per cent on all loans from the State Literary and Retirement Funds.

The State police retirement bill would have permitted troopers to retire at 55. During last minute amending of the measure, however, language was inserted which would have forced more than 100 troopers off the force at 55 without retirement benefits. Because of this flaw, the bill's patrons agreed to the Governor letting the bill die without signature.

Girls' School Lists 4 Men; Ratio: 27 to 1

About the last thing you'd expect to find in the classrooms of St. Mary's Female Seminary are four male students. But there they are—and actually studying, too.

Probably most surprised of all would be the group of distinguished statesmen who established the school in 1840 as an institution or the "education of the mothers of future generations."

As far as teaching them about women, the boys all agree, "we're here, but we don't understand girls any better than we did before."

Situated at St. Marys City on the banks of the St. Marys River deep in southern Maryland, the seminary has operated as a girls' school for more than a century.

It was not the girls that attracted these boys to the seminary. Though it occurred to them early that there were approximately 27 girls to each boy, actually, they had other reasons for enrolling.

Earl Compton, 22-year-old veteran of two years in the Army, has three years of education coming to him under the GI Bill. He figured that if he could get a year of college training near his home at Lexington Park and hold a job to pay tuition expenses, he could save his veteran's schooling for completion elsewhere.

Crouch, who is 23 years old, spent the greater part of his three years in the service with the Air Forces on Guam. He tried to enroll at the University of Maryland, but was too late. Since his father, like Compton's, is a civilian employe at the Patuxent Naval Air Test Station, the seminary offered the only place near home where he could get advanced training.

William King has lived in St. Marys County for virtually all of his 20 years. Though his home is in Leonardtown, just 16 miles from the seminary, King does not commute but stays during the week with friends near the school. His father, Aloysius King, edits a weekly newspaper in Leonardtown.

King says, "I never knew how dumb I was till I came down here."

"Not me," chimed in Crouch, "I was always in the dark." The boys seem to think the girls are a pretty good bunch of students, except when it comes to political science. As far as the boys are concerned, in political discussions the male is supreme.

Another student, Andrew Shorter of Valley Lee, is enrolled for a few courses with an eye to training for the ministry.

Scout Exposition Attracts Large Crowd

Friends and parents last night crowded the opening of the Western District Boy Scout Exposition in the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, 4461 Connecticut ave. nw.

Exhibits from Cub Scout handicraft to fingerprinting by Scout Troop 31, sponsored by FBI American Legion Post No. 56, feature the two-day exhibition, open from noon to 10:30 p. m. today.

Among the boths attracting attention last night were those displaying or explaining marksmanship, chemistry, machine shop, hobbies, safety, printing, bird study, rocks and minerals, and camping. Bunting fluttered from the rigging of a mast set up by Sea Scout Ship 21.

Admission proceeds are being divided among the various participating troops.

Funeral Rites Set Sunday for E. C. Stanton

A memorial service for Edmund C. Stanton, 70, of 4815 Battery lane, Bethesda, Md., who died Thursday after suffering a stroke a week ago, will be held Sunday at 3:30 p. m. at Florida Avenue Friends Meeting, 2111 Florida ave. nw.

Mr. Stanton was on the staff of the office of supervising architect, Public Building Administration, until his retirement in March, 1942. As an electrical engineer, he had been in charge of recommendations for fire prevention in Government buildings. He had participated in the architectural preperation of Government buildings in the Federal triangle.

A native of Barnesville, Ohio, he was a graduate of the Friends Boarding School there, where he later taught for four years, and of the Westtown School, near Philadelphia.

He helped make a Government survey in Panama for the Hydrographic Office before coming to Washington in 1906.

Mr. Stanton was former secretary of the Federal Fire Council, a life member of the Washington Society of Engineers and a life member of the Society of Friends.

He was a trustee of the Florida Avenue Friends Meeting, a member of the permanent board of the Baltimore Yearly Meeting of Friends and a charter member and former officer of the National Capital Astronomers.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sina M. Stanton and two sons; Dr. Henry E. Stanton, a physicist at the Argonne National Laboratory, University of Chicago, and Dr. Alfred H. Stanton, a psychiatrist at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Md.

Commentator Finds Guard Unnecessary

Despite requests by the sponsors of last night's talk by Johannes Steel for police protection, the only violence occasioned was the vituperance of the commentator's attacks on the Marshall Plan.

The Washington Cooperative Bookshop, sponsors of the public meeting at the IOOF Hall, 419 7th st. nw., had sought police protection prior to the meeting. Although Capt. Howard Covell, of the First Precinct, had said he would detail no special police for the meeting, members of the subversive squad and FBI agents were spotted among the crowd, taking notes.

The Marshall Plan was termed "a device to maintain Fascist regimes" in some countries abroad and "to maintain tyranny in Greece," by the speaker. He charged that the taxpayers' money is "not going to create sound economy, but to establish economic equities for American Business."

"It is not even a plan to stop communism," he contended.

Yesterday's Bogota incident is a "characteristic reaction to American foreign policy," Steel declared, adding "the presence alone of Secretary Marshall is enough to start a revolution.' "

G. L. Carpenter Of Salvation Army Is Dead

Sydney, Australia, April 9 (AP).—George Lyndon Carpenter, 77, retired Salvation Army general, died today after an operation.

General Carpenter succeeded General Evangeline Booth as head of the Salvation Army in 1939 and served until 1946.

A native of New South Wales and a carpenter, he joined the Salvation Army in Melbourne as a cadet in 1892. His wife, also a Salvationist, was at his deathbed.

The general was born on June 20, 1872, at Newcastle, Australia. He intended to be a printer, and his first work was as a "devil" at very small pay.

From a printer's devil at $1.25 a week, he rose to head the Salvation Army throughout the world.

Under the traditional title of general, he supervised from international headquarters in London, the far-flung activities of the army's three million active members on all continents and administered properties worth 100 million dollars.

He visited Washington in August 1942.

Rep. Orville Zimmerman

The funeral party, accompanying the body of Representative Orville Zimmerman (D., Mo.) to Kennett, Mo., will leave this morning by airplane for Malden, Mo., aides of Mr. Zimmerman said yesterday.

Mrs. Zimmerman, a group of Missouri congressmen representing the House of Representatives and several close friends, will drive from the Malden Airport to Kennett. They are expected to arrive at Malden about noon.

Funeral services are planned at the Kennett Armory at 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

Meanwhile, a tangle over orders which kept a son, Lieut. Joe A. Zimmerman, medical officer, in Germany, apparently were straightened out by the Army.

Mr. Zimmerman's aides were notified that the son was being flown to Westover Field, Mass., and would be transferred to another plane there and flown directly to Malden.

If he fails to arrive before the scheduled time for funeral services, they will be postponed until he reaches Kennett, the aides said.

Peace Unit Tables Stand On Palestine

Delegates to the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace yesterday defied its "Policy Making Committee" by refusing to indorse a resolution censuring the United States Government's reversal of stand on the Palestine Partition. About 10 days ago the policy making group issued a strong statement calling upon this country to revert to its original partition stand. But a cross section of women from 28 States, attending the final session of the WACLP's fifth annual conclave in the Shoreham Hotel, turned thumbs down on the question.

Article two of the resolution, "We regard the failure to implement this decision promptly (Palestine Partition) to be a major error of United States and U. N. policy," brought the greatest opposition, lead by Dr. Sarah Wambaugh, international lawyer and plebiscite expert; and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon of this city. Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, legislation chairman and official lobbyist for the national organization, is another who voiced disapproval of the measure, as did Mrs. Parker Van Zant, also of this city.

Following an hour's controversy on the subject, the measure was tabled.

Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, retiring president of the WACLP, said that tabling of the motion meant neither denial or confirmation of the committee's policy, adding, "The committee really decides on policies, not the delegates." General sentiment, however, among the conclave attendants, was definite opposition to the measure and the committee's stand.

Postponed indefinitely was a resolution on pending congressional resolutions to strengthen the United Nations so it could interpret and enforce world law to prevent war. Opponents of the measure argued that people aren't yet ready for world government.

Bill of Rights Considered

Indorsed unanimously were resolutions calling upon Congress to consider measures to give further practical effect to our own Bill of Rights and to the goals and obligations of the International Declaration and the Covenant of Human Rights; to approve a 65-million-dollar loan to the United Nations for the construction of its permanent headquarters in New York.

Passed, subject to rewording of various phrases, was a measure calling upon the United States to recognize its responsibility for leadership in the United Nations by making every effort to act through the machinery of the U. N. and its specialized agencies.

During the luncheon hour George V. Allen, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, told delegates that since the iron curtain fell over Czechoslovakia, "Voice of America" radio listeners had increased between 5 and 8 per cent.

The speaker also revealed that he is being deluged with suggestions on how to run the State Department's Information Service. "I have not set a definite policy," he explained. "I am open to suggestions," adding, "but there's such a variety, conflicting ones that all have to be considered carefully."

Secretary Allen, who was formerly U. S. Ambassador to Iran, concluded that the job of selling democracy to the world "is a cooperative job of all educational and information facilities, not a one-man office job."

Speaking on "World Economy," Dr. Mildred Northrop of Bryn Mawr College, stressed the importance of prosperity in all nations. "There cannot be a stable economy in this country unless there is equal stability and prosperity in other nations of the world," she explained.

LADY ASTOR'S famous wit brought forth gales of laughter from her audience yesterday at the annual luncheon of the wo-Men's National Farm and Garden Association, Capital Division. Lady Astor Says to Aid Reelin' World

'Women Must Face Giant Job Ahead'

By Peggy Preston

With her customary vigor and wit Lady Astor called on women to "get in there and do something about world peace" in a talk yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

The sharp-tongued Lady Astor addressed several hundred guests at the annual luncheon of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, Capital Division. Proceeds are for the benefit of the association's scholarship fund and world peace program.

As Britain's first woman member of Parliament, Virginia-born Nancy Langhorne Astor has been clamoring for women's rights for the past 30 years. Now retired, she is still firing away at injustices and discriminations against her sex.

"I'm a redhot feminist," she chuckled. "And just the right person to have been asked to speak at this meeting."

But she told her audience with serious emphasis that "we're livin' in a reelin', rockin' world" and women must resign themselves to the fact that they have to take a strong stand in national and international affairs.

"If you don't, then don't cry about it when your world comes tumbling down on your heads."

It's Women's Task

Lady Astor said she did not blame anyone for not wanting to look at Europe today. She did so recently, during a tour of devastated areas. But women must make themselves look and face up to the giant job that is ahead of them. It is their task to change the thinking of the world, to substitute moral, spiritual values for the materialistic ones that are setting Europe back beyond the Dark Ages.

"Communism cannot win because it is sheer materialism. It tells man he is better than God."

And, she added, "Any woman knows better than that."

Lady Astor dotted her talk with references to her dual love of both England and America. "I'm often accused of being British," she said. "Now, how can that be. You know I'm a Virginian, and did you ever see a Virginian that wanted to be anything else?"

She stressed her belief in her two countries as the great examples of what democracy has meant in freedom and progress.

"Great Britain and America between them have enough love of God and humanity to cash in on democracy and put dictatorships back where they belong," she declared.

She asserted that she considered the British form of government is more democratic than the American in some respects and suggested that we could improve ours by "borrowing" a few ideas from our British cousins.

The dynamic visitor had some advice for women who are considering going into public life.

Don't Fear Abuse

"Don't be afraid of abuse," she told them. "Look at all I've taken. But I didn't go into public life for fun—although I've had a lot of fun in it."

And don't pay any attention to the critics who say that women get into politics because they want to be men. "Who in thunderation wants to be a man?" she asked.

She also called on women to do something about the abundance of advertising in newspapers and radio programs. "You'd think Americans were only interesting in leg art and food," she contended.

Preceding Lady Astor's talk there was a brief speech by Sir John Orr, director general, Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations.

Final Day of Ida Jean Kain's 18-Day Diet

Now Stay on Safe and Svelte Side

By Ida Jean Kain

AND so our model Barbara Anne lives happily ever after! I feel quite safe in blithely making this prediction. Barrie knows now there is a way to eat and stay beautifully slim. She has a new respect for the science of nutrition. And she will keep her good figure because—it's fun to be slim!

Our model has changed her food habits for good. At the very beginning of our course I told her that if she did not re-educate her appetite, there was little use in starting . . . for she would be struggling against every cream puff and chocolate bar not only during the diet but for all the years ahead. Fattening foods no longer have any power over her. She's won!

To keep on the safe and svelte side, Barbara Anne continues to plan the three meals around the protective foods. For those of you who tuned in late they are: lean meat, eggs, cheese, buttermilk or skim milk, fresh fruits and vegetables and whole grain bread. Those foods prevent the hidden hunger that leads to overeating and fat, and supply the materials that keep you younger longer.

Watch Those Fats

Watch the fats! You can keep twice as many calories out of the diet by not going back to fried foods, gravies, mayonnaise, and salads swimming in French dressing. From now on, use only half as much dressing and cream as you did in your plump days. Make it habit.

Some of you want to know the score on cocktails. If you take a cocktail before dinner, delete the dessert. When cocktail calories are burned for energy, the dessert calories will be stored. Skip them.

Above all watch your calorie weakness. If it's hot rolls, or excess bread and butter, pin yourself down to one roll or one slice of bread with a meal, and a half pat of butter per meal.

If it's "seconds," don't have the serving dishes in front of your place. To break the habit of eating between meals, be away from food at the snack-habit time. If desserts are your biggest stumbling block, restrict yourself to your favorite dessert once a week or twice at the most. Other times have fresh fruit. That can get to be habit, too.

Ten Minutes for Exercise

The role of exercise is to keep your figure slim in the middle! Ten minutes a day of stretching, side-bending and leg swinging can keep the muscles toned . . . and well-toned muscles rebuff fat.

This is the last day of our Spring Tonic Figure Course. You may want to know how long you can continue to follow the daily diets. Follow them until you reach normal weight. These menus furnish an abundance of every food essential with the exception of calories.

And when you reach normal . . . what then? Continue to build the menus around the protective foods, adding 500 to 1000 calories a day. Stay with the pattern of eating that will let you stay happily slim ever after!

Ambassador Ali Entertains Friends at Farewell Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

ONE of the best-liked diplomats in town, Asaf Ali, Ambassador of India, said farewell to his friends at a reception yesterday afternoon. The envoy received between the hours of 6 and 8 with the Minister of India, R. K. Nehru, who will act as charge d'affaires, and Mrs. Nehru.

Mrs. Ali returned to India several months ago, and the Ambassador wil lsail on Wednesday on the Queen Elizabeth. The day before he sails he will entertain at a cocktail party at the Waldorf Astoria in New York for U. N. delegates to the Security Council.

Of Moslem faith, Ambassador Ali has kept his ties with Hindu India, and he was appointed the first Indian Ambassador to the United States. The embassy drawing room, where guests gathered, is one of the loveliest in town, and yesterday its rose-colored draperies and ivory satin upholstery looking particularly well, set off by pany azalea plants.

Mr. and Mrs. George Abell were in the crowd, both looking beautifully tanned after a Florida holiday. Mrs. Abell wore gold combs in her hair, no hat, and her suit, which she called her "'lame football costume," was a black and silver checked lame jacket with full black satin skirt.

Standing nearby were the Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, and the Russian Counselor, Grigori G. Dolbin. A sort of "bloc" was formed when the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila were brought up and warmly welcomed by the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, Sava N. Kosanovic.

Signora Tarchiana, wife of the Italian Ambassador, looked smart as ever, in black two piece suit with beige feathered hat. She spoke of her daughter's twins, Dora and Letitia, said they might be back from Italy for a short visit late in the spring, but it wasn't at all certain. The Ambassador, with tomato juice in hand, had a chat with Raymond Muir of the State Department.

The Willard Thorps were there, talking with the Australian Naval Attache and Mrs. S. H. K. Spurgeon. The Charge d'Affaires of Pakistan, M. O. A. Baig, the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet, the Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen, former United States Ambassador to China and Mrs. Nelson Johnson, the Ambassador of Poland, Josef Winiewicz, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann were others in the interesting gathering.

Mrs. Stapleton Entertains For Daughter, Mrs. Renchard

By Marie McNair

MRS. DANIEL C. STAPLETON'S cards for her cocktail party yesterday read, "to Welcome Stellita Renchard." But friends gathering at the Sulgrave Club were to say farewell also for Mrs. Stapleton's daughter is taking off Monday to rejoin her husband, George Renchard, and the three little Renchards whom she left behind at The Hague.

During her fortnight visit home, Stellita found time for a trip to Cincinnati and a glimpse of many of her old friends there and here. As she couldn't bring the children with her, photographs of all three served next best and interested friends were clustered around a small table in the club's wide foyer where a dozen snapshots were on view.

Mother and daughter were a handsome team as they stood together to welcome the guests, white-haired Mrs. Stapleton in a black lace gown with purple orchids pinned to her purse. Mrs. Renchard's smart brown satin, ankle length, tied with three bows down the front of the bodice.

'Old Washington' Attends

This was a party for "old Washington" with everybody calling everybody else by their first names. There were many there who have known Stellita since she first began to coo, were at her debut, her wedding and the christenings of her own babies.

Mrs. Perry Heath and Mrs. Paul Johnson were recalling those days, and occasions as they chatted together; Mrs. Mason Gulick could remember, too, perhaps, and she did remember when the Sulgrave Club was the Wadsworth house and she would meet there with the singing class.

Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, whose husband was a recent Ambassador to the Netherlands, talked with Mrs. Robert Guggenheim about the Junior League Follies, until Colonel Guggenheim came along and whiske dhis wife off for a dance.

Mrs. John Biddle was there and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman was enjoying the party from a comfortable chair on the sidelines.

Comdr. Donald MacDonald was there with Mrs. MacDonald, who's so pretty people were asking who she was. "Why I know her mother!" was the answer when they learned she's the former Cecilia vom Rath.

Mrs. William Sowers in a black frock with pale blue straw hat stopped to speak to Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock and Mrs. William Jennings Price. Mrs. Henry Flood was going on to Admiral and Mrs. Cato Glover's party out in Chevy Chase and Pendleton Hogan had promised to stop by at the United Nations Club for Mme. Wissa's party in honor of Princess Toussoun and Cornelius Bretsch who'll be married today.

Mrs. Frank Allen wearing a white hat and black and white frock had to get home to get dressed for the Georgetown Visitation Convent's cotillion; Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith were among those who lingered and others there were Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, Miss Virginia Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kauffmann, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd Rogers, jr., Nathan Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schenck and Mrs. McCeney Werlich.

Plan Dinner As Testimonial To S.Americans

Chief of Staff Gen. Omar Bradley and Mrs. Bradley, will attend Washington's first Pan American dinner at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday, April 13, as guests of Mrs. Truxtun Beale. Mr. Beale is chairman of the invitation committee for the testimony dinner tendered by the people of Washington in honor of their neighbors to the south.

Slated for the eve of Pan American Day, the dinner will mark the fifty-eighth anniversary of the Pan American Union. George V. Allen, as Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, will be the principal speaker, while Dr. Don Julian R. Caceres, Ambassador from Honduras and ranking member of the Latin American Diplomatic Corps, will respond.

Aides Are Hosts To First Lady, Miss Truman

Mrs. Truman and Miss Margaret Truman attended the party given yesterday by White House aides from 6 to 8 o'clock. An imposing list of officials comprised the list, together with members of the younger group in society. The party was held at the home of Col. Godfrey McHugh and Maj. William Zimmerman.

The Secretary of Defense and Mrs. James V. Forrestal were among the guests, and the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall. Also, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown.

Over 100 in all attended, and among the younger guests were Miss Drucie Snyder, Mrs. Tyson Lyeth, Miss Nancy Anderson, Miss Romona North, Miss Margret Thors, Miss Evelyn Kem, Col. Albert Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Tinch, Mr. and Mrs. James MacPherson, Miss Marie Hopkins and Tom Morgan, jr.

Ask Anne
Your Question On Homemaking

Can you tell me how to clean a reversible fiber rug at home? W. J. D.

Fiber rugs can be cleaned very well with a vacuum cleaner. Since the dust sifts through them, occasionally they should be rolled up so that the floor beneath can also be thoroughly cleaned. After the floor is cleaned, go over both sides of the rug with the sweeper and replace.

I set my hot coffee pot down on my buffet on an inadequate hot plate holder backed with cardboard. The cardboard left a fuzzy circle which has now turned darker on top of the walnut-colored surface. I do not know exactly what the wood is, so cannot be more specific. What must I do to restore the high luster on the veneer? H. C. C.

Since the coffee pot was hot enough to cause the hot pad to stick to the wood, the damage has probably penetrated beneath the finish and refinishing is the only solution. However, this might make the spot less noticeable. Make a paste by mixing a fine abrasive such as rottenstone or powdered pumice with linseed oil. Rub this paste over the damaged area, using care not to get it into the surrounding areas. When the fuzzy circle has been removed in this way, wipe with a clean soft cloth and repolish the entire buffet top with wax or furniture polish.

Recently I purchased a combination chest and wardrobe for baby's clothes. The inside of the drawers of the chest are not finished off and therefore very rough. I would like to smooth them and perhaps lacquer or shellac them. What procedure do I follow? Would it be wise to use perfumed lacquer? If so, where may I purchase it? D. J. M.

I'd suggest smoothing the inside surfaces of the chest drawers by sanding with fine sandpaper. Wrap it around a block of wood for ease in using. The perfume lacquer you ask about can be painted on the drawer and will serve as a sachet but not as a finish for the wood. It is a luxury item and rather expensive, but imparts a delightful fragrance to clothing. One place that sells it is the toilet goods counter of a Washington department store. For further information, call District 5300.

Is there anything I can use to remove "tattletale" grey from my baby's diapers that will not be injurious to her skin? During the day, the diapers are dropped into a diaper solution. The next morning, they are put through two hot and two cold rinses. Boiling or putting them through a bluing rinse does not seem to help. They are hung outside whenever the weather permits; otherwise, they are dried in the basement. Any suggestions will be greatly appreciated. C. A. M.

Using household bleach either in the water in which the diapers are washed or in the water in which they are soaked will do much to whiten them. Add about a cup of bleach to a washer full of hot, soapy water. Wash and rinse very well in three tubs of clear water. This should remove every trace of the bleach so it cannot be irritating to the baby. Use the bleach in every washing until the diapers are snowy white, then use it only every third or fourth wash.

I have about five pounds of dates on hand which I should like to use to good advantage in the next few months. Do you know of any good recipes for cookies, candies, salads, etc., in which I could use dates? J. T. B.

Dates are delicious used in drop cookies or quick breads as you would use raisins. Also, they can be chopped and combined with chopped nuts and moistened with cream for a cake filling or mixed with mayonnaise for sandwich fillings. Or, stuff them with nuts, peanut butter or candied orange peel; roll in powdered sugar and use as a confection. A delicious dessert is Date Torte Pudding.

⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups chopped dates
1½ cups broken walnut meats

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat sugar into eggs; add vanilla and stir in date and nut mixture, then add flour mixture. Turn into buttered shallow glass baking pan; bake in slow oven 325 degrees F. 50 to 60 minutes. Serve with cream, whipped or plain. Serves 6 to 8 persons.

One on the Aisle—

Webb Sits Out A Top Comedy

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL'S "Sitting Pretty" is a honey of a comedy. Don't miss it.

In it you'll find suave, sophisticated Clifton Webb playing sitter in a suburban home that includes three small boys and a Great Dane. The lines are good, Webb is enormously funny, and if you can't laugh at this one you might as well just give up.

"Sitting Pretty" is the sort of comedy you shouldn't be told too much about as to plot, lines and situations. Its amusement lies in its fundamental idea. Wife Maureen O'Hara, plagued by the sitter problem, tosses an ad in the Saturday Review and finds Webb ensconced in her maid's room, adamantly refusing to leave.

"I despise children," Webb confesses, "but I know how to handle them."

This is the sheer, unvarnished truth, and before Miss O'Hara and Husband Robert Young know what's struck their Hummingbird Hill home, the youngsters are quietly practicing Yogi, washing their hands before meals and even wanting to call Webb "Uncle," a familiarity which he repels with icy hauteur. The youngest is taught the pointlessness of tossing his cereal in the eyes of others at the breakfast table and the Great Dane relapses into quiescent thought.

Webb describes himself simply as a "Genius" and keeps his room under his own specially devised lock. His presence in the house causes suburban gossip which unspools a predictable plot. But F. Hugh Herbert, who seems to have been making an unending study of suburban mores, has worked out a script that short-cuts through the obvious scenes. While this is a satire on suburbiana, don't mistake its farcical nature for a slice-of-life. It's all in fun.

Haydn Also Scores

Helping to keep things spinning is a wry performance by Richard Haydn, who devotes his hands to collecting iris pollen and his tongue to the spreading of gossip. The Haydn voice is beautifully tuned to this aspish creature. Miss O'Hara and Young are abetted by a knowing batch of farceurs, but it's really Webb's picture.

And the man makes the most of it. His disdain and pointed observations ("Certainly I'm a thinker. If more people simply sat and thought the world wouldn't be in the mess that it is.") form a comedy portrait of high order.

So leave your troubles and critical faculties at home. Just trot down to the Capitol for a generous pack of laughs. "Sitting Pretty" is the best comedy 1948 has brought along yet.

THE CAPITOL'S stage show comes to a high-grade climax with Gautier's Bricklayers, those talented dogs that put on one of the best vaudeville acts on the boards. Don't ask us why we laugh at Gautier's dogs but find the birds of "Bill and Coo" depressing. That's a matter of personal taste. Also on the bill are Artie Dunn, a resourceful comedian who grows on you, and Marjorie Knapp, who's just fine when she's singing of "The Robert E. Lee" but is as hopeless as most females who attempt Yale's "Wiffenpoof" song. Why don't the Yale boys form a society banning the singing of "Wiffenpoof" by gals who add gestures and notes to the old song? Other than that, Miss Knapp is good listening. Troy and Lynn, dancers, open the bill. And back with Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestra for a week is Lynn Allison, who sang at the Capitol for six years before she became a mama. Domestic life hasn't hurt the sweet quality of Lynn's voice, but she must be surprised at the welcome she's getting from the audiences. Evidently she is remembered.

GLEN ECHO PARK opens its thirty-eighth season this afternoon at 1 o'clock . . . Whether it will snow, as it did one opening day several years ago, is out of the weatherman's hands, but, says the amusement park, snow or not, here we come . . . Paul Kain's orchestra returns to the ballroom after a two-season absence, with Helen Martin as songstress . . . If you've not got a car, clamber aboard the Capital Transit Line's Route 20.

TODAY, also brings Gene Autry, the singing cowboy, and his Western Variety Show to the Uline Arena . . . With the popular Western star will be Rufe Davis, the Cass Country Boys and Beulah, Eunice and Ione Kettle, "The Pinafores" . . . Autry will do his Sunday night broadcast from WTOP.

DOWN IN DAHLGREN, Virginia, last night the Naval Proving Ground folks opened their own production of "Claudia" . . . Admiral C. T. Joy's outfit had to work quickly, advancing their opening to the week dress rehearsals were scheduled . . . Last night was "Family Night" and there'll be a second performance tonight, writes Mrs. F. W. Dresch.

BOOK NOTES: "Allegro" is out in book form, published by Knopf at $2.50; this means that though you may not get to see the Hammerstein-Rogers musical, it's now possible to read the script and toss the record album into the machine . . . Rene Ray, the ingenue of "An Inspector Calls," is another performer who works with the words. Her "Wraxton Marne" has been published in England, and her second, "Bitter Heritage," will be released in this country shortly. She's also serving as United States correspondent for an English magazine . . . Cornelia Otis Skinner has an article in the current New Yorker that should interest the town's radio ladies, before whose mikes she visited while here in "Lady Windemere's Fan." Her subject is their daily programs, though not necessarily anyone's in particular.

WEEKENDING: "Panic" and "Volpone" hold over at the Dupont and Hippodrome, respectively . . . That Irish folk play of Dr. Shawn Sheahan, "The Matchmakers Outmatched," is repeated tonight at Washington-Lee High, Arlington . . . "Dr. Knock," with France's Louis Jouvet, is Community Education's film Sunday night at 8:15, at 914 20th st. . . . Upcoming at the National after "The Play's the Thing" is the return of "The Red Mill" for a one-week stay.

"SITTING PRETTY." Twentieth Century Fox release, produced by Samuel G. Engel, directed by Walter Lang, screenplay by F. Hugh Herbert, based on a novel by Gwen Davenport. At the Capitol.

Deserved a Better Story

Game Susan Peter's Comeback Obscured by Cigarette Smoke

SURELY you've noticed the importance of cigarette smoking in the more tense emotional scenes of the movies. The heroine of "The Sign of the Ram" puffs away like an overdone roast, and I'm afraid you get pretty conscious of her smoking long before the picture comes to its fitful close on the Metropolitan screen.

This is singularly unfortunate, for the heroine in question is Susan Peters, a promising young player before an auto accident three years ago paralyzed her. She now returns to the screen, gamely acting from a wheelchair, but the script is too much for the gifted Miss Peters, who goes from climax to climax with a sort of misspent vigor.

The story is one of those things about an egocentric woman who seems to have conquered her wheelchair imprisonment. Before the picture opens, we learn, she had saved the lives of her stepson and stepdaughter at great cost to herself.

Everyone tells Leah St. Aubyn (yes, that's the name they've given her, for she's English!) that she is wonderful. They never tire of remarking on how clever, how wonderful, how unselfish, how remarkable Leah is. The picture suggests that Leah goes wacky because she was born under the sign of the ram, which, by the way, we're now in. This means she's stubborn, says the astrology-minded. But anyone with a modicum of sense can understand that Leah goes off her trolley from sheer boredom of being told how wonderful she is.

And This Isn't England

Leah tells her stepdaughter's fiance that Jane couldn't possibly leave home. Leah breaks up her stepson's marriage by passing around the word that his fiancee is the daughter of an insane father. Leah suspects romance between her secretary, Phyllis Thaxter, and her husband, Alexander Knox. Leah sends people diving into the Cornish Sea and generally raises hob with everyone.

All this, of course, to the lighting, puffing and squashing of innumerable cigarettes. Leah even smokes in bed, and it's with some moral indignation I tell you that she gets by with this better than local residents seem to have been doing lately.

The setting is presumably today's England, an England happily filled with servants, no rationing and motor cars. And heaven alone knows the taxes Leah must be paying on her chain of cigarettes.

It is too bad a better story couldn't have been worked out for Miss Peter's return to the screen. It's a problem, I grant you, to find a suitable role for the game brown-eyed actress, but "The Sign of the Ram" just isn't it. R. L. C.

"THE SIGN OF THE RAM." Columbia release, produced by Irving Cummings, directed by John Sturges, screenplay by Charles Bennett based on the novel by Margaret Ferguson. At the Metropolitan.

Dr. Ashworth of Health Bureau Gets 3d Retirement Extension

The Commissioners yesterday granted Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Food Inspection, his third six-month extension beyond the legal retirement age.

Ashworth

The extension will be effective for six months beginning July 1. Dr. Ashworth will be 71 on June 10.

The action was taken on the recommendation of Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who cited the "exceptional value" of Dr. Ashworth's service and "the extreme difficulty in securing competent replacement."

Dr. Ashworth joined the Health Department in 1901 as a dairy herd inspector and has been director of food inspection services for the past 32 years. He is credited with developing a system for rating barns, cattle and milk plants with numerical score cards.

Devers to Talk At 'American Day' Observance Here

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander United States Army Field Forces, will be principal speaker at "I Am an American Day" observance here at Sylvan Theater Sunday, May 16.

Massing of colors by veterans' organizations will open the ceremonies, tentatively scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

The program will include patriotic songs by the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church Choir, and presentation of certificates to citizens naturalized the past year, the committee arranging the observance announced last night at a meeting in the District Building board room.

Efforts are being made to obtain nationally known performers, General Chairman Herbert Jacobi reported. Commander John P. Floyd was named publicity chairman; Col. Waldron C. Leonard, arrangement chairman, and S. Hanessian seating and program chairman.

No Inhibitions About 'Volpone'

By Richard L. Coe

"VOLPONE," at the Hippodrome, is a deliciously amusing farce that could never have come from the careful caterers of Hollywood.

As a matter of fact, it comes to the New York ave. cinema by a most circuitous route. It stems from a comedy written in 1606 by Shakespeare's pal, Ben Jonson, back in the late '20s it was adapted into frisky French style by Stefan Zweig and done in New York by the Theater Guild, a version still acted by the Comedie Francaise. Several years ago Zweig and Jules Romains polished it up for the French films with juicy parts for the late Harry Baur and Louis Jouvet. This is the sardonic triumph which finally has reached our dilatory Capital.

The story tells of a sly, rich Venetian trader, Volpone, who pretends he's dying to watch the effects on his friends. His closest friend, Mosca, is in on the joke, and with the promise of Volpone's wealth as bait invigles one man to give gold to Volpone, another to disinherit his son and a third to offer him his wife. The idea of becoming Volpone's wealthy widow also lures the outstanding fille de joie of Venice.

This leads to some bitterly amusing scenes in the "dying" man's bedrom and a titivating trial scene, which follows an upset when the disinherited son walks in on Volpone and the baffled, borrowed wife. The three hopeful inheritors sacrifice their public face to insure their greedy ends, but Mosca, the Fly, outwits them all, including Volpone, the Fox.

Broad, Brilliant Acting

There is a rushing, grandiose style in the telling of Jonson's old tale, immensely brightened by the performers. Baur rolls his eyes, relishes squeaks and groans with brillian. aplomb, and Jouvet is coldly aloof to the devilry he achieves. And Charles Dullin, as the moneylender, has a magnificent scene licking his chops over the thought that, old as he is, he's seen the deaths of most of his friends. His cackling is sheer magnificence.

All this lustry, uninhibited behavior is refreshing stuff to watch, particularly to anyone who gets regular doses of the nonoffensive niceties of our homegrown product. The English substitute achieve some of the rowdy force of the soundtrack, but their idiomatic phrasing still suggests that importers of foreign films ought to give far more attention to this linqual key than they do.

When you say "COME BACK AGAIN" It costs your carrier time and money

YOUR Washington Post carrier has to pay for the papers he's delivered whether he collects from you or not. So when you ask him to "come back later" because you're not prepared for his visit, it's money out of his pocket to meet his bill and time out of his day to call on you again.

If you work for a salary you expect to be paid the first time you see the paymaster on payday. If you run a business you expect your customers to send in their checks for your services promptly. You have expenses of your own and it takes money to meet them. Just so, your carrier depends on payment from you to take care of his expenses.

When you fail him on collection night it may mean a sacrifice of money he needs for immediate personal, home or school purposes. If you ask him to return later he's wasted the time that it took to visit you—and a carrier's life is a busy one. He has a seven-day-a-week early morning job in addition to going to school, doing his homework and joining in outside activities.

Be fair with your carrier. Pay him on time. And if you're moving, notify him in advance. Papers delivered after you've moved do you no good, and your carrier has to pay for them. If you don't see the boy, call NA. 4200 and tell Circulation.

Your carrier will thank you for your cooperation by giving you the best of service.

Wind Topples Trees, Injures Bridge Worker

High winds, reaching peak gust force of 52 miles an hour, yesterday blew a bridge workman off a bridge pier, knocked down trees and generally raised hob in this area.

The winds, diminishing last night, were but a prelude to frost and subfreezing temperatures for District suburbs and the Maryland and Virginia fruit belt. Apply growers hoped to lessen freeze damage to their budding trees with smudge pots.

Injured in the bridge mishap at 4 p. m. yesterday was Robert M. Smith, 32, of 223 6th st. se. He was toppled from Pier No. 7 of the new Highway Bridge 10 feet to a barge below when a guest of wind caught the broadside of a long board he was carrying.

Smith was admitted to Emergency Hospital with possible fractures of the skull and shoulder.

Earlier, at 11 a. m., a 30-foot maple tree crashed atop the three-week-old, 1948 Oldsmobile sedan of Joseph C. DeNisco, parked in front of his home at 808 N. Kenmore st., Arlington, Va. The tree crushed in the sedan's roof.

At about the same time, another tree was felled by the wind at South 2d st. and Pershing dr., Arlington, striking but not breaking power lines. Workmen cut up both trees to clear the roadways before normal traffic could be resumed.

In the Chesapeake Bay, high winds blew the 8000-ton attack cruiser Calloway aground in Craighill Channel, about 3 miles north of Baltimore Light, the Coast Guard reported. Three tugs sent to her assistance were reported being hampered by the winds in their efforts to free the 465-foot long vessel.

1 Woman, 11 Men Are Slated for Paroles in Md.

Annapolis, Md., April 9 (AP).—One woman and 11 men will be paroled from Maryland penal institutions by a ruling of Governor Lane today.

The paroles were recommended by F. Murray Benson, chairman of the State Board of Parole and Probation.

The list included Henry Washington, 25-year-old former sailor convicted of manslaughter in Anne Arundel County four years ago. He was found guilty of fatally stabbing Albert Young, another sailor, in an Annapolis street fight and sentenced to eight years in the House of Correction. Also paroled were Fannie Chisley, Montgomery County Court, 1947, not more than two years, Reformatory for Women, larceny; Grove W. Phillips, Jr., Prince Georges County Court, 1946, not more than three years, Reformatory for Males, storehousebreaking, violation of parole; Dennis L. Webber, Frederick County Court, 1946, four years, House of Correction, robbery.

Maryland Electric Co-op Gets REA Loan of $400,000

The Southern Maryland Electric Cooperative, Hughesville, Md., yesterday was granted a $400,000 loan by the Rural Electrification Administration.

According to Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), the funds will be used to complete previously approved construction for wider electric service, including 27 miles of new transmission lines.

The Acomock North Hampton Electric Cooperative of Parksley, Va., was granted $150,000 by the agency. A total of $2,825,000 was granted by REA to seven borrowers.

Rammed Tanker Escapes Holocaust

Baltimore, April 9 (AP).—Forty-three seamen came into port today with a harrowing tale of how a few hours before they had been only 50 feet and three seconds from death.

The men were the crew of the tanker Kettle Hill which collided yesterday with the Norwegian freighter Granville in a Chesapeake Bay fog.

The 10,000-ton Kettle Hill, loaded with 110,000 barrels of fuel oil, caught fire after the collision and it took the crew two hours to bring the blaze under control.

After the ship crawled into port this morning, Seaman Jose E. Segura of New York City said:

"Three more seconds and the Grandville would have hit No. 2 tank—and we wouldn't be sitting here talking about it if it had."

The No. 2 tank was filled with oil and had the fire started there it would have gone over the entire ship in very little time.

Neely Fortunate In Missing Client

Fairmont, W. Va., April 9 (AP).—Friends of Attorney Matthew M. Neely former Governor of West Virginia and veteran of many years in the United States Senate and House, were congratulating him today on his failure to get a certain client.

It was disclosed that when domestic difficulties arose a short time ago between Ernie Lee Yost and his wife, Nellie Marie, a close relative suggested that she get Neely to represent her in a projected divorce proceeding.

Instead, she chose Lawyer Tucker Moroose because he was an old classmate at school.

Moroose and Mrs. Yost were shot to death in the attorney's office Wednesday when the couple came to talk over terms of their separation. Yost then shot himself fatally.

Blandy Urges Aid, U. S. Arms To Avert War

Virginia Beach, Va., April 9 (AP).—Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, United States Navy, today said a balanced United States fighting force and help for nations opposing communism is the best preventive of World War III.

In an address at the annual convention of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, Blandy said the inevitability of another war depends upon whether "Uncle Sam continues in the fond delusions which prompted him to demobilize to fast and too far after the recent war."

"The best preventive of World War III is to help those nations who are still struggling to keep their heads above the dark waters of communism, and to build up a United States balanced fighting force of sufficient strength to induce respect among those who seem to misunderstand all other arguments," he said.

The commander in chief, United States Atlantic Fleet, told the advertising men that another war probably would find the Navy "using atomic weapons as well as defending against them," and predicted:

"Unless man's international cooperative ability soon matches his rapidly advancing technology, he is due for some exchanges of blows which will make all previous war seem like old fashioned cavalry skirmishes preceding the real battle."

Blandy discussed "Sea Power in the Atomic Age," and termed "completely fallacious" the theory that a war can be won against a powerful enemy in 24 hours by atomic bombing.

Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan will speak at the dedication May 8 of the naval reserve armory at Roanoke, Va.

Representative Almond (D., Va.) said in Washington yesterday he had been advised by the Secretary that he would be able to attend by adjusting a conflict in his schedule.

Almond in turn has accepted tentatively an invitation by Sullivan to fly with him to Roanoke. Almond will be in Richmond as the new State Attorney General, but said he hoped to come to Washington to make the trip by air.

4 Herd Association Supervisors Appointed

Blacksburg, Va., April 9 (AP).—Virginia Agricultural Extension Service today announced the appointment of these men as supervisors of State Dairy Herd Improvement Associations:

Frank Cox of Camp, Mecklenburg-Charlotte DHIA; Shipley Diehl of Harrisonburg, Augusta No. 2 DHIA; Lynn Follin of Purcellville, Marva (Maryland-Virginia Peninsula) DHIA, and Raymond Hundley, jr., of Troutville, Tidewater DHIA.

Hysteria Seen Going in Trail Of Hoop Skirt

Richmond, Va., April 9 (AP).—Hysteria is becoming the vanishing mental disorder, a leading psychiatrist said today.

This ailment once was pretty commonplace in women, said Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, director of the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital. But since the female of the species has become emancipated and shed her Victorian standards, her perchant for hysteria has declined sharply.

Dr. Ebaugh said hysteria's decline came with better knowledge of sex, fewer repressions and better education. He also gave a good share of the credit to better medical care and the fact practitioners have long since ceased to "blueprint" their patients' ailments.

"Hysteria is a mimic of many organic and neurological diseases," he told the five-State Virginia Institute Seminar in Psychiatry and Neurology. "It is a phenomenon in which a repression of sex or other desire is converted into symptoms. And it may show itself in paralysis of the arms or legs . . . or in complete loss of sight."

Ebauch, who is chairman of the American Psychiatric Association's committee on psychiatry in medical education and a consultant to the Public Health Service, said he believed the Nation's mental ills could best be cared for by:

1. More emphasis on normality rather than the so-called abnormalities.

2. Extension of the existing public health services to mental matters. For example, he said it had been determined in industry that 85 per cent of the accidents are caused by about 15 per cent of the workers. Something should be done about the "accident proneness" of these people and efforts made to correct them.

3. Every community and every general hospital should have a mental division set up with the same definitive procedures established as those used in general medicine. He noted that the psychiatric division of the Medical College of Virginia was one of the best he had seen anywhere in the Nation.

4. Follow-up care of all mental patients.

5. Community consultative service; postgraduate educational facilities in psychiatry and seminars where the specialists could exchange their views and findings.

Gerrity Issues Interim Report on European Tour

The following letter has been received from John F. Gerrity of 6523 Clarendon rd., Bethesda, Md., who is currently touring Europe:

"During the past few weeks, I've covered thousands of miles in planes, trains, buses, autos, and ramshackle trucks.

"I've talked to scores of Germans, Belgians, Austrians, Italians and Frenchmen; with Attlee, Churchill, the Pope, de Gasperi, and many others. I've learned two things:

THE MYSTERY DEEPENS

If you're wondering about the name of the "Mystery Tune" on the local airwaves, your worries are practically over. Five District Liners have the answer.

The only trouble is that all five of their answers are different.

Emmett Vowell of 2608 University pl. nw. says its "Hindustan." Avery Marks of the Wardman Park says no, it's "The Sheik of Araby."

E. J. Baldwin of 2703 Upshur st., Mt. Rainier, Md., calls it "Egyptianella," but 12-year-old Faith Silverman of 1700 Lanier pl. nw. counters with "Turkish Nights."

And Nate Leiderman of 6206 Georgia ave. nw. says all four of his colleagues are wrong—it's "The Vision of Salome."

"IN (PAUSE) SECURITY"

Memo to WMAL:

Mrs. W. R. Bauguess of 236 Hamilton st. nw. points out that your Marine Corps recruiting announcement emerges from her loudspeaker like this:

". . . Nowhere can you find more insecurity . . ."

REDUCTIO AD ABSURDUM

F. R. Wilson joins the protest against numbering our babies. He writes:

"The frozen food locker plant at Waldorf, Md., has an electrically heated branding iron which burns the initials of the owner into hams and bacon for sure identification. Why don't they borrow that device?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three-month-old pup, complete with harness, tag, and five pounds of dog food. Needs young playmates and plenty of space to romp." (Taylor 8408).

"Two affectionate female kittens, 7 months old." (Taylor 6279 after noon).

"THEY ALSO SERVE . . ."

"Many bus drivers," writes George C. Burton of 1115 Penn st. ne., "seem to assume that they were hired to leave as many customers stranded as possible.

"This makes Capital Transit driver No. 2777 a welcome exception to the rule, because whenever he sees a passenger hustling toward a bus stop, he waits."

Truly an unusual fellow, George. He's Joseph B. Evans of 1910 U pl. se., who explains his patience like this:

"If I were the one who was running to catch a bus and the driver didn't wait for me, he'd be strictly no good in my book. And that's what people would think of me, if I didn't wait. So I wait."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. June Moore, 414 11th st. ne.: Thanks for the kind words.

SUGGESTION

Mrs. Robert A. Rockwell of 4104 53d ave., Hyattsville, Md., suggests that this would be an excellent time to improve the signs and road markers in Rock Creek and Potomac Parks.

Very often the signs are so badly placed or displayed that even home folks have trouble reading them until it's too late, and the wrong turn has been made.

And as for the tourists—wow! If they survive the through arrows, right arrows, and left arrows, the park signs get 'em.

WANNA BET, POP?

But take a tip from Pop!

Abe Lyman, the bandleader, is making his first visit to New York in five years. He's been here for a week and except for two short midnight trips for coffee and a sandwich, Lyman hasn't been out of his hotel room. He stays in, playing gin rummy with Phil Spitalny—a rivalry of long standing. On the day Lyman married Rose Blaine, Spitalny invited the bridegroom to play some gin while they were waiting for the guests to assemble. A half hour later his brother rushed into the room and said, "Abe, come on. They're playing the wedding march" . . . "Tel 'em to vamp till ready," said Lyman. "The guy is got me on a blitz."

PROBLEM: Gen. Mark Clark reveals this story: In his Fifteenth Army Group in Italy there were soldiers representing a dozen nationalities under his command. He wrote to General Marshall about the problems entailed in commanding such complex units. Marshall replied each time that he saw no reasons why this should create a problem . . . One day Marshall advised Clark that he was arriving for a visit. "I want no honors," Marshall added. General Clark told the Chief of Staff: "Okay. Just a few simple honors" . . . When Marshall arrived at Casserta, an honor guard was at the airport—an honor guard representing the dozen different nationalities. Marshall's greetings had to be translated 12 times. "Now," he told Clark, "I understand your problem."

Californians Row Over Oil Lobby

By Drew Pearson

More than one lobbyist is eagerly watching the row between California congressmen and California State officials over the question of how one phase of the oil lobby is going to be paid.

Warren

When California Congressmen heard that California taxpayers were to be nicked $25,000 to pay for a high-powered Washington publicity agent, plus the expenses of State Attorney General Fred Hauser, they held a protest meeting. Congressman Dick Welch of San Francisco, and John Phillips of Banning, were appointed a committee to urge Governor Warren to veto the $25,000.

They phoned him immediately. Warren was ill. Three times since they have tried. Up to this writing, no luck.

Meanwhile Everett Mattoon, Deputy Attorney General of California, called Welch in high dither, explained that the money had already been spent for the expenses of California's legal staff to come to Washington. Also $500 a week was promised to Eugene Kelly, Washington former newsman, for high-powered tidelands oil publicity.

"The money might be necessary," growled Welch, "but which is most important—the money or votes. You better forget about the money."

He argued that news of the lobbying fund had already caused a lot of damage.

Mattoon tried to belittle the statement of Senator John Evan, Los Angeles Republican, that the fund would be used to pay luncheon checks for Midwestern Congressmen in Washington.

"Any explanation you might have," snapped Welch, "couldn't be made on the floor of the House."

Behind Stassen Landslide

1. The large number of Democrats who switch-voted in the Republican primary. Most of these interlopers cast ballots for Stassen delegates.

2. The "silent vote" of former GIs, most of whom were itching for a chance to express their feelings tangibly against MacArthur. MacArthur forces became so jittery about GI opposition that they bought up every available billboard in western Wisconsin to promote the general's cause.

3. Stassen did a terrific job of campaigning. His direct-mail campaign and his radio forum, in which he let any one ask questions, made a big hit with Wisconsin voters.

Balloting in the State's Democratic presidential primary, in which Harry Truman was uncontested, was the lightest in years. Registered Democrats voted in the Republican primary, partly because they were pro-Stassen and partly because they saw no point in voting for the unopposed Truman.

Tax Advice to Truman

A last-minute appeal to President Truman to sign the GOP tax-reduction bill was pressed the other day by Utah's Senator Elbert Thomas, a liberal Democrat.

Calling at the White House, the Utahn urged the President to accept the Republican legislation for the sake of the tax reforms in it.

"To oppose the bill," he argued, "would mean opposing reforms that take years and years to achieve."

He referred to the community-property provision which entitles a wife to claim half her husband's earnings, and the increased exemption for people over 65 years old.

"You can sign the bill," he urged, "and send recommendations to change the rates later according to the procedure outlined in the bill."

"I don't want reductions either," said Thomas, "but we cannot give up the reforms that go with it."

"Mr. President," he continued, "if you once get over the idea that we will raise and lower exemptions according to the need, then nobody will object."

However, the President made it clear that he was more interested in balancing the budget and stocking up a surplus.

Merry-Go-Round

Interior Department officers expect more than half a million visitors to Roosevelt's grave at Hyde Park this summer . . . Third Party vice presidential candidate Glen Taylor invaded West Virginia the other day, did not oppose West Virginia's able Senator Harley Kilgore . . . George Allen resumed his romance with President Truman after a White House meeting which Allen attended as a member of the Roosevelt Foundation. He had been purged a year ago because he was booming Eisenhower . . . Robert E. Sherwood has just completed editing Harry Hopkins memoirs. Hopkins was in the midst of writing them when he died . . . Indiana Senator Jenner looks jittery these days. He has just given up smoking.

You've seen lots of sweater sales . . . particularly low-priced sweaters and 3.95 IS a low price. But when 3.95 buys qou a sweater like these, of imported or domestic wool, it's time to act! The majority of these are imported zephyr yarns, light weight, highly mercerized woolens that give you warmth without bulk and weight. Every sweater is hand-fashioned where it counts . . . Every sweater has looped cuffs and bottoms, not circular machine stitching. Note the pockets . . . they are all set in . . . not just tacked on. Every sweater is cut full and roomy . . . no skimping. Examine them closely, note how they are cut and woven in a custom manner . . . even the edge seams are turned. Only because the manufacturer was anxious to clear his stocks were we able to buy them at this low price. Choose from a variety of smart weaves, in green, camel, maize, blue, luggage, white, navy and vertical three tone stripes. Top quality in materials, in workmanship, in styling. Come early for your choice . . . you'll want several at this price.
